DURING THE PAST TWO MONTHS

So many large Eastern Clothing Houses failed that some of the large Woolen Manufacturers became uneasy, and did not know where it was safe to place their merchandise, and when large firms like ours proposed to close out their entire production of a certain style for SPOT CASH, they were glad to sell the goods at a great sacrifice. Among the lots closed by our firm, Browning, King & Co., was one of 1,000 Pieces, or 35,000 Yards, HAWTHORN DIAGONALS, Dark Green, Brown and other mixtures, enough for which they divided among their FIVE Retail Stores, and we are selling them at $10.00!

6,500 OVERCOATS

Same goods in other houses are sold at $16 50 to $18 00. Also, from another line of ALL WOOL CASSIMERES and DIAGONALS, equally as good, a number of styles

MEN'S SUITS AT $12!

Worth elsewhere $16 to $18. These goods are all made at our New York factory, and are as perfect in fit and make as tailor-made clothes, and are very different from same grade of goods sold by other houses in this city, bought of Eastern Jobbers, and which have a certain wholesale, ready-made appearance that the practiced eye at once detects, and which becomes painfully apparent to the buyer after such clothes have been worn a short time.

Some Special Matters Treating Upon European Topics of Moment.

The Tonquin Campaign—The Panic Caused by the Recent Underground Railway Explosions Increasing—Parnell Has Lost Heart.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, November 5.—A special cablegram to the WORLD, dated London, 4:11 p. m. says the British Cabinet has decided that the dispute between China and France has reached the verge of open warfare. Most explicit and positive instructions looking to proper and thorough conservation of British interests were yesterday and to-day issued to all departments. Inquiry at the admiralty, where during the past forty-eight hours unusual activity has prevailed, has elicited the fact that the lords of the admiralty have been directed to proceed at once to completely reinforce the British fleet in Chinese waters. It is understood the majority of heavier vessels of the British fleet will be divided between Chinese ports, the remainder maintained for rapid cruising duty, and that British traders and residents at different ports be at once offered shelter. A rumor is current in the city to-night that orders have been issued to naval commanders to resist all attempts on the part of the French to blockade any Chinese port where there exists an actual British interest, above Pekin.

IT IS REPORTED

that a conference has been arranged between Marquis Tseng and Earl Granville, British Minister of Foreign Affairs; Lord Hartington, Minister of War, and Lord Northbrook, First Lord of the Admiralty. According to report this conference is arranged for Monday at Folkestone, present official residence of Marquis Tseng.

THE PANIC INCREASING.

The panic caused by the recent underground railway explosions is increasing instead of diminishing. The fact that several prominent delegates to the recent Socialistic Congress in London were passengers on the attacked train, and severely injured by the explosions has convinced the public that the Socialists had nothing to do with the outrage. The claim of O'Donovan Rossa, the American, that the Irish did the deed, has strengthened the belief among the

MASS OF THE ENGLISH PEOPLE

that the outrage was the work of Fenians, and at no time since the Phœnix Park assassinations has public indignation against all Irish secret societies been so active and bitter. The London Sunday Observer of this date, in a leading editorial, demands that the Government take notice of these Fenian avowals by securing the arrest, extradition and trial of O'Donovan Rossa and his New York colleagues. Underground railway companies, whose property has been immensely prejudiced by the explosion, have, it is understood, determined to unite in a demand upon the Government for a thorough investigation into the boasted connection of Fenians with explosions. Mr. Parnell seems to have lost heart. The meeting held to-day at Skibbereen, in the interest of the Parnell fund, despite all efforts to make it a success, was a miserable failure. Only six persons attended and not one of them was a farmer. Not a penny was subscribed.

Indications.

HOME AGAIN.

Mary Churchill Arrives in the City This Morning.

An Affecting Scene at the Family Residence—Mary Narrates Her Wanderings in Detail—End of the Churchill Mystery.

Shortly after 8 o'clock this morning a gentleman wrapped in a long overcoat left the Vandalia train at the Main Street Depot and hurried down the stairs. By his side was a stout, plump young lady, whose face was covered with a veil. The lady and gentleman attracted little or no attention as they got into a close carriage, which was evidently in waiting for them, and were driven west on Washington avenue through the mud and rain. The twenty or thirty persons who were gathered at the depot had no idea that the plump little lady was the long-missing Mary Churchill, and that this was her return trip to St. Louis, in the company of her father. The pair passed by almost unnoticed, and probably nobody who saw them suspected who they were. The ride to the house was made in quick time, and in a minute after

MARY WAS IN HER MOTHER'S ARMS.

She did not forget to kiss and hug the fat boy baby, her brother, and the one member of her family which she seemed to regret leaving most poignantly. The scene between mother and daughter was a most affecting one. The lady had been driven about to distraction by her daughter's long continued absence, and when the girl rushed into the room, even Col. Churchill was carried away by the wildness of his wife's joy.

Shortly after the carriage had driven away, a POST-DISPATCH reporter rang the bell at the family residence, No. 2737 Morgan street. The door was opened by Miss Mary's little sister, and soon the reporter was seated in the parlor talking to Col. Churchill.

On the piano, at one side of the room, was a picture of the chubby baby which has been the object of so much of Mary's solicitude. "Yes," said Col. Churchill, "we got home this morning, daughter and I. We had a very pleasant trip, which was devoid of interest. After we left Indianapolis everything went smoothly enough. But at that place I ran the gauntlet of a larger number of reporters than ever I saw together before in my life. I suppose there were twenty of them, although my imagination may have magnified the number. At the hotel as we were preparing to leave, they trooped in, and I tell you, I had to exercise the greatest diligence to prevent myself being interviewed to death. Dr. Van Valzah of Terre Haute, who is my daughter's cousin, and Judge O. J. Kelley of Terre Haute, were with me. Dr. Van Valzah had been seen in Mary's company, and I made him go into another car at the depot because I was afraid they might recognize her through him.

WE SAT IN THE CAR

side by side. I said to Mary, 'We must not pay any attention to each other. We must not talk.' And we did not. The reporters kept a procession, and some of them looked very closely at us, but they were not sure, so none of them spoke. We got away all right, and as I told you, we arrived safely. My daughter is in the best of health. That is about all there is to say."

At this moment, a school friend of the returned girl called and was shown into the parlor. The visiting girl said that she had known Mary at the Stoddard and that she was so glad that she had returned. The little girl, in her joy over the return of her friend, gave way slightly to loquacity, and, without any suggestion on the part of Col. Churchill or the reporter, she began to denounce the Caldwell theory in connection with Miss Churchill's disappearance with much vehemence. "I know she never went away with that horrid Mr. Caldwell," said she, "because Miss Mary and most of the big girls never liked him. In fact, he never was much of a friend of any girl that did not give him presents or things." Then Col. Churchill stepped out into the hall and called "Mary, Mary," a couple of times up the stairs. In a few minutes the girl who has been so thoroughly hunted and so exhaustively written up, walked in, her hand in that of a female relative, who looked at her with a tenderness that showed how glad she was to see the wanderer once more within the door.

MARY GREETED

her little school friend, in a cheery tone. The first question she asked her was, "Are you glad to see me at home again?" Col. Churchill, his daughter and the reporter then gathered near the window and the story of the disappearance, the sojourn in Indianapolis and the return home was all gone over. It was a short story when all things were considered, and singularly devoid of interest. In brief, the discovery was made as follows: Thomas J. Gallagher, a reporter of the Globe-Democrat, was sitting in the office of the Chief of Police of Indianapolis about 4:30 p. m. Saturday. He was talking of Mary Churchill. He been sent to Indianapolis to find her. In fact, Mr. Gallagher had done little else but talk of and hunt Mary Churchill ever since she disappeared. While the conversation was in progress a ring sounded on the telephone and Dr. W. B. Fletcher, superintendent of the Insane Asylum, was found to be at the other end, telephoning that he thought he had a young lady at the institution which was the girl whom the police and Mr. Gallagher were searching. The asylum is situated some distance out of town. Captain of Police Campbell and Mr. Gallagher drove out to the place, and when Miss Churchill's picture was shown to Dr. Fletcher, he said immediately, "That is the girl who is working here as Jennie Lockwood. She has been employed in the ironing-room, and is one of the best girls I have ever had in the institution. Mrs. Talbot, the matron of the ironing-room, says she is a little jewel."

Miss Churchill almost smiled as this matter was repeated to her this morning in her father's parlor. She evidently enjoyed the fact that she had been able to earn her own living, and that she had found favor with her employer. As she stood and looked over her father's shoulder the reporter thought that she was singularly quiet and self-possessed for a girl who had caused so much trouble. She would scarcely be recognized from her description. There were no tears in her pretty blue eyes, nor were there any signs that she had been weeping recently. She was clad in a calico dress, which did not fit her well, and there were no ornaments or other attempts at display about her person. Her blonde hair, which has been described from one end of the country to the other, was arranged almost as on the night she left, a bang running back two or three inches, being combed down over her forehead, while the rest of it was piled in a knot on the top of her head. She had a dimple in her chin.

HER FACE

was full, her eye bright and clear. Taken altogether, she looked like a girl inclined to be plump, the picture of health and without a care in the world. Her absence had not worried her much, and the fact is that she gained nearly twenty-five pounds avoirdupois since she has been away. "I have little to say," said Miss Churchill. "I left home and I am back again. That is the whole of it."

"But the details."

"Oh, well, I had determined for some time to leave home. I had my reason, but that I will tell to nobody. I made my preparations, and I had my plans. When my parents left home I had on a polka dot dress. But the dress and hat I really wore was prepared a week before, and they were packed away in the cellar in a box."

"Yes," said Col. Churchill, I now learn that that jewelry of hers which we thought she took away with her was what furnished her railroad fare. Mary tells me she pawned it a day or two before she left, and used the money to buy her railroad ticket. She got something about $15 on the pledge, she thinks, but she does not remember the pawnshop where she placed the things."

"Yes," said Miss Churchill, continuing, "I determined to go away that Sunday evening, and I left the house shortly before 7:30 p. m. I had put on this dark dress and hat, which I had in the cellar, and I placed a veil over my face. I went out the back gate and down the alley towards Beaumont street. I met nobody but a negro boy in the alley. He lived just across from our back gate, and I was frightened out of my wits for fear he would recognize me, but he did not. When I got to Beaumont street I thought it was safer to keep in the alley, so I went down that way to Jefferson avenue. Then I turned over to Morgan street, went down a considerable way, then over to Washington avenue, along that street until I got to Fourteenth street. I turned south on that street and passed both of the parks and the Four Courts on my way to the Union Depot. When I got there I sat in the ladies' waiting-room, and when they called out a train was going I got on board. That took me to Decatur.

I WAITED AT THAT PLACE

just long enough to get a train to Indianapolis, and arrived in that town on Monday night. I slept that night at a hotel. The next morning I got a place."

"Yes," said Col. Churchill again, "she went to an employment office, but the man had only one situation vacant, chambermaid or something in a hotel. Mary did not like the place, but she told him she had to have employment immediately, so she took it. She remained there a week or two and then got this place in the asylum. You see she had only $1 70 when she arrived in Indianapolis. She was compelled to get work immediately. She ate nothing, she tells me, from the time she left home, Sunday night, until Tuesday noon. She tried to eat, but she could not, she says. At the asylum Dr. Fletcher tells me she worked very hard. She labored at the ironing table ten hours every day. She arose at 5:30 a. m., got her breakfast at 6 o'clock, and worked hard all day. He also says that she read hard, and not trashy books either, and that she obtained permission to use the piano and greatly pleased them all with her playing. Why, a week or so ago, Miss Lockwood—that is Mary, you know—was promoted. They took her out of the laundry and put her in charge of a ward in the insane asylum, a more responsible position. Oh, she seemed to be a general favorite."

"I wish you would correct one statement," said Miss Churchill. "This paper here, the Republican, makes me say that I read all the papers, and that I laughed at what they were saying about me and about the search. Now I am not such a heartless girl as all that. I never saw but two papers

ALL THE TIME I WAS AWAY.

One of them said that I had been found at Keokuk and the other, a POST-DISPATCH, contained a denial of that horrid Caldwell story."

"You have denied that story yourself, most vigorously."

Miss Churchill said nothing, but she looked as though she would like to interview the man that started that clew after the manner in which John L. Sullivan is the chief exponent.

"And that letter?"

"I'll tell you how I came to write that. I got acquainted with a German girl, this Miss Holtgen, in the institution. She and I talked about the missing Mary Churchill. She asked me if I had read about the matter. I questioned her, and she said the girl's parents had been driven nearly crazy by the matter. These two words, 'nearly crazy,' were the cause of my writing that letter to my father. I never before rightly appreciated their feelings, and I wrote home at once. No, I kept away from the papers. I was afraid to look at them; and then to say that I could laugh at all this trouble."

"Dr. Fletcher thought all the time," said Col. Churchill, "that Mary had run away from some place. Her hands were not those of a working girl. He even wrote to Chief of Police Campbell here, and mentioned that Mary was in Indianapolis, but I do not think that Campbell got the letter. At least I never heard of it until Fletcher told me."

"Oh, I guess the papers have been saying all kinds of things about me. The POST-DISPATCH is the only St. Louis paper I saw."

"Did you get the copy that contained your picture?"

"No," said Miss Churchill; "was my picture published?" and again she showed signs of not liking all this notoriety.

After some further talk Miss Churchill excused herself and went out to breakfast.

came to the door with the reporter and said: "It has turned out as I expected. I always was sure there would be no bad developments in the case. Mary left home and went to earn her own living."

"She had plenty of grit at least."

"Yes, to work as hard as that as an ironing girl."

"Will she remain at home?"

"Certainly, I suppose so. If she prefers to go back to work I have no intention to prevent her. She has not spoken about this matter, but I am pretty sure she will stay. Her mother was good to her, but she had certain rules which she made Mary observe. Her mother knew that nobody could become a good musician without sufficient practice, so she made her play four hours a day. She insisted that Mary should practice two hours before breakfast, and for an hour and a half to two hours after supper. But I think she had little other trouble.

As usual, all clews in the case are at fault. Especially so was the one that ascribed an improper motive to Miss Churchill's departure. This is proven by the fact that the girl was in Indianapolis the night after she left St. Louis, and that she has been at work there every day since, including Saturday, when she was found. The solution seems to be that she left because she was dissatisfied at home, and, that when once away, she had too much grit and pluck to apply for help or attempt to return, but set about earning her own living in an honest way.

CARONDELET JOTTINGS.

"He is a good man when sober, but most always drunk," were the words of Mrs. Antoine Gamache this morning, as she appeared in the Police Court to prosecute her husband for beating her and calling her vile names. This caused the husband to be fined $25.

The national status of the Carondelet Police Court now stands as follows: Judge Von Gerrichten, German; Attorney Chapin, American; Clerk Poupeney, Frenchman, and Marshal Frank, Bohemian.

Daniel Haley, evidently a bad boy, was fined this morning $5 and costs for fighting. The father refused to pay the fine or come into court, but the mother came, and by her pleading obtained the boy's release on payment of costs. She told him, however, that the next time she would let him go to the Work House.

The train leaving Chouteau avenue depot at 10:40 a. m., now runs to the barracks, and the one formerly leaving at 12:05 only runs to Carondelet. The train which has been leaving Robert avenue for the city at 11:26 a. m. now leaves at 11:39, and the heretofore 12:05 p. m. train from Chouteau avenue, now leaves at 12:19. These changes went into effect this morning.

Sydney Low, who was killed on saturday, was a resident of this part of the city, and had been fireman on the short trains for several months. He leaves a wife and three children, the oldest being but 6 years. His death was a most horrible one, and well illustrates the great caution needed when about railroads. His train stopped at the chute, at the foot of Lesperance street for coal, and he stepped from the engine to the ground, standing with his back to the opposite track. While in this position a freight train was backing towards him, but six of the cars had passed without touching him, when he leaned back so that a car struck his shoulder and in an instant he was under the wheels of the train and mangled almost out of the semblance of a human being. The remains were gathered up and brought here, and this morning sent to Irondale, his former home.

BELLEVILLE.

The grand shooting tournament of the St. Clair County Schutzengilde will come off next Saturday.

The ball of the Iron-Molders' Union, on Saturday, was a success.

J. S. Melharot, one of the most prominent citizens in the West End, died yesterday. He was 62 years old.

An accident occurred in the Ainsworth Mine, near Lebanon. A piece of slate fell upon one of the workingmen, named Wm. Glass, and smashed a finger of his left hand.

The police arrested a man for carrying concealed weapons on Saturday. He comes from Central City, Ill., and says that he has so much trouble that he wanted to commit suicide. His revolver is now in the hands of the City Marshal.

The citizens of our neighboring city of Lebanon are in a state of no little excitement over some very unpleasant affairs in the public schools. One of the teachers named J. Carson chastised a 14-year-old girl for breaking the rules one day last week. The balance of the children were tittering meanwhile, and Mr. Carson turned to Cora Sherwood with the switch he had in his hand. Ed Sherwood, a brother of the girl, got angry about that and made some remarks about Mr. Carson's action, which led him to attack the boy. The latter arose and a fight between teacher and scholar ensued, which lasted about ten minutes. Sherwood managed to break two of Carson's fingers. Another boy named Ade Wallace fought the same teacher on one of the following days. The attention of the School Directors was called to these affairs, and they held a meeting and informed Mr. Carson they would have to dismiss him if another act of the kind took place. The two boys are still permitted in school.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

County Clerk Canty received for licenses during the month of October $584 50.

Rachael Brown and C. Ballard, both ladies of color, indulged in a street fight on Fourth street this morning, and were each fined $3 and costs.

Charles Gilbert had a hearing before 'Squire Draggon this morning on a charge of assault and battery, and was assessed $8 and costs. Wm. Butler paid the same amount for a like offense.

Mrs. Fresize, while leaning over a porch at the Miller boarding-house on Third street, near Broadway, last evening, was precipitated to the ground, a distance of fourteen feet, by a portion of the porch giving away. Dr. Winton was summoned and found the lady suffering from a compound fracture of the left arm and severe internal injuries.

Michael Sullivan, Colgan and Florence Sullivan gave bond this morning to answer the charge of assaulting and beating Tim J. Canty. A gang of which the above named were members, attacked Mr. Canty in a Fourth Ward saloon last night, beating him in a most brutal manner. The cases are set for hearing in 'Squire Draggon's court.

THE GRAND JURY.

Judge Van Wagoner Reads a Lengthy Charge.

He Reads Statutes, Reports, Lectures the Press and Defines the Grand Jurors' Duties—Who the Twelve Are.

When the Criminal Court was convened in the November term this morning, Judge Van Wagoner selected from the panel, summoned last week, the following Grand Jury: Peter L. Foy, foreman; C. C. Rainwater, Rolla L. Billingsley, Thomas C. Dutro, Douglas Kingsland, Isaac M. Veitch, Richard Schulenburg, Wm. Ziock, Wm. C. Orr, Merrick M. Beck, Edward H. Semple and Francis Lepere.

Great interest was manifested in the Court's instructions, and as Judge Van Wagoner began to address the gentlemen of the Grand Jury the attorneys and spectators within the bar moved eagerly forward. The Judge read the instructions in his usual deep, impressive voice, and was listened to with closest attention.

"ST. LOUIS CRIMINAL COURT,
"November Term, 1883.

"GENTLEMEN—You have just been selected by this court according to the forms of law of this State applicable to the city of St. Louis, and have been sworn to faithfully discharge the duties of the grand inquest in and for the City of St. Louis. It is my duty to call the attention of each and every Grand Jury impaneled in this court to certain statutes in order that you may make diligent inquiries as to whether any of the provisions of them have been violated. If they have been violated that then you may indict the offenders and bring to punishment.

"Your attention is called to chapter 98 of the Revised Statutes of this State of 1879, entitled Dramshops; also to sections 1,051, 1,052 of chapter 23, article 1, of the same statutes entitled General Duties of Courts; also to the laws of this State entitled "an act to prevent partners of prosecuting attorneys from defending in criminal cases; also to sections 1,791, 1,792, 1,793, 1,794, of chapter 24, article 15, of volume 1, Revised Statutes of Missouri of 1879, entitled "Of Grand Juries and their proceedings."

[The Judge here read the statutes referred to.] If a Grand Juror knows of the commission of an indictable offense or any material fact touching the same he must disclose such fact to his fellows and be sworn as a witness before them. Grand Jurors may be indicted or prosecuted by the Grand Jury of which he is a member, but when any information shall be given against a Grand Juror it shall be the duty of the foreman to at once give notice to the Circuit Attorney of the fact, and if on examination there are grounds for proceeding against such juror he shall inform the Court thereof.

NO INDICTMENT

can be found without the concurrence of at least nine of your number, and when so found the foreman of the Grand Jury shall certify under his hand that such indictment is a true bill.

"When there is not a concurrence of nine Grand Jurors in finding an indictment the foreman shall certify under his hand that such is 'not a true bill.'

"Every indictment must be signed by the Circuit Attorney or the Assistant Circuit Attorney.

"Indictments found by your body must be presented by your foreman, in your presence, to the court."

At the conclusion of the reading of the law governing the secrecy of Grand Juries, the Court said: "This is all the law relative to disclosing what transpires before them. It certainly deals with Grand Jurors and witnesses, but is as silent as the grave as to other offenders. The Circuit Attorney is the custodian of the testimony taken before the Grand Jury—not this court. There is no statutory provision permitting, requiring or allowing it to be filed in this court as a part of its records.

THE CIRCUIT ATTORNEY ALONE IS ITS CUSTODIAN.

Even any notes that may be taken by a stenographer of testimony taken for the State before the Grand Jury shall be filed with the Circuit Attorney for his use. See sections 4 and 5 of session acts of 1881, entitled Court of Records. Read this:

"Your honorable body or this court cannot enact laws. We must take them as we find them, and if the laws do not provide for a full and complete preservation of the Grand Jury secrets, it is not your fault, and if these creators of public opinion would remedy these omissions, rather than vilify the courts and the Grand Jury, but rather assist them in the discharge of their duties, it would be better for this community.

"You may and should appoint one of your number to be the clerk of your body, whose duty it is to keep and preserve minutes of your proceedings and of the evidence before you, which minutes must be given to the Circuit Attorney, as provided by section 1,780, Revised Statutes of 1879.

IT IS A MATTER OF GREAT IMPORTANCE

that these minutes should be properly kept, so as to inform the Circuit Attorney and the Assistant Circuit Attorney of what the witnesses, relied on by the State to prove the State's case on the trial of an indictment, have testified to before your body, in order that the Circuit Attorney or his assistant may readily prepare for the proper presentation of each case before the court and jury trying the case. The neglect of this duty often leads to the escape of guilty parties indicted for crime for the want of proper information given to the Circuit Attorney of the testimony and the names of the witnesses relied on by the State, who have testified before your body.

"THE WITNESSES' NAMES

in each case should be properly indorsed on the back of the indictment for the information of the State and the accused.

"Whenever required by your body, it is the duty of the Circuit Attorney and the Assistant Circuit Attorney to attend you for the purpose of examining witnesses in your presence or to give to you advice upon any legal matter, but they are not, nor is either of them to advise you on other than legal matters. The Circuit Attorney shall be allowed at all times to appear before your body on his request for the purpose of giving information relative to any matter cognizable by you and may be permitted to interrogate witnesses before you when your body or he shall deem it necessary. But neither the Circuit Attorney nor the Assistant Circuit Attorney nor any other person or persons, except the Grand Jurors, shall be permitted to be present during the expression of your opinion or the giving of your votes or any other matter before your body, nor whether or not you shall find a true bill or ignore a bill.

"OUTSIDE ATTORNEYS, that is, attorneys and counselors at law, other than the Circuit Attorney or the Assistant Circuit Attorney, must not be permitted to appear before you to give you legal advice or opinions on any subject whatsoever, as attorneys and counselors at law. They have no business before your body in any capacity except as witnesses in matters under investigation before your body.

"The Clerk of this court will issue all subpœnas that you may require to be issued in your investigations, and the Sheriff will serve all legal processes you may require, and await your body for that purpose. The usual instructions to visit the eleemosynary institutions and the Work House and Jail are here given, and a word spoken for policemen on night duty who should be called in the morning is given against paying attention to anonymous communications. You should be careful in finding indictments against any one. No indictment should be found unless the evidence taken before you convinces you of the guilt of the accused. Your proceedings are exparte. The accused has no voice in your deliberations. You cannot take his evidence, or examine witnesses in his behalf. His mouth is closed. Hence the necessity of extreme caution, for it is no light or trivial matter to be accused of a crime by formal presentment of an indictment. The mere presentment of an indictment for crime against any one, be he or she ever so innocent, even if proved innocent on trial, leaves a sting and a stain that can never be wholly erased. While you cannot send for and examine witnesses in behalf of the accused, nevertheless if a witness is before you, and has been brought before you by the State, you can hear all the witness knows of the subject matter under investigation, in relation to the accused, whether it inculpates or exculpates the accused, and you are to give it due weight in passing upon the guilt or innocence of the accused.

"YOU SHOULD FIRST UNDERSTAND THE LAW

governing each case that you may be called upon to deliberate; if you are in doubt as to the law, you should be advised by the Circuit Attorney or the Assistant Circuit Attorney in relation to the law, then you, not the Circuit or Assistant Circuit Attorney, will apply the evidence to the law and indict or not indict, as you may in your judgment deem right. All felonies must be presented by indictment. Misdemeanors can be presented by indictment or by information. This court can only try felonies. The Court of Criminal Correction has jurisdiction of misdemeanors. You should not indict for misdemeanors without being satisfied that a good reason exists for you doing so. The reason why you should not indict for misdemeanors is this: Any person who is aggrieved on account of the committing of a misdemeanor can at once apply to the Court of Criminal Correction and have a speedy trial: they are commenced by information, and all misdemeanors, whether presented by indictment or information, must be tried in the Court of Criminal Correction; they cannot be tried in this court. No indictment for a felony should be found by your body without the accused has first had a preliminary examination—unless you are satisfied that.

THE PUBLIC GOOD DEMANDS IT.

The law provides for preliminary examinations. Courts are provided for that purpose, and it is but just to the accused that a preliminary examination should be accorded to him, for it not unfrequently happens that the accused can and does establish his innocence at such preliminary examination, and is thus spared the humiliation and disgrace of an indictment for crime and a trial thereunder. You will please heed this, gentlemen, and bear in mind that while you have solemn duties to perform, the citizen also has rights that should be respected by you. You have ample power to investigate crime; the law clothes you with great powers, momentary in its effects for weal or woe to the citizens of the State, Hence it is that the law aims to get for grand jurors men of good character—men of acknowledged moral standing, who have aims higher and nobler than spiteful revenges, and beyond finding food to feed the depraved taste of the scandal-monger and those who grow fat on the misfortunes of their fellows. You should also bear in mind that you are an arm of the court, a part of the machinery used for the protection of society from the vicious and from their crimes committed against it. You are bound to heed the court's lawful instructions, while at the same time you are left free to act in your legitimate sphere. You are neither above it—you cannot get along without its power and the court cannot get along without your aid.

"You will first pay attention to the cases of those persons who are confined in jail on criminal charges and awaiting investigation by your body. You will next look into the charges against persons who are accused of crime and are on bond, commonly called jail cases. Next, to such other business as may properly be the subject of your investigation. The Court is not informed of any special matters requiring your attentions except this. The honorable Grand Jury impaneled at the October term of this court, have presented the following request to the court, and have asked the court to instruct you to consider the subject mentioned in a report made at the close of their session to this court.

"The Court.

IN OBEDIENCE TO THIS RESPECTFUL REQUEST, instructs you to consider and act upon whatever subject is embraced in the report, in such way as may seem right and proper under the solemn obligation you owe to your fellow citizens of this city and State.

"Let your action be free from all matter not founded upon absolute facts, as produced before you in evidence. On no account let it be merely sensational or unsubstantiated by convincing proof of the verity of what your public utterances may be.

"You are to deal with stubborn facts, not mere fancy.

"And whenever you are in doubt as to what you should do, recur the solemn oath you have taken. It is an epitome of the grand jurors' duty. A juryman that takes that as his guide for duty will not go astray.

"And now, gentlemen, you have been chosen by this court, because it believes that you are conservative, law-abiding and law-loving citizens, whose highest aim is to preserve the peace and good order of society, to punish crime committed wickedly and willfully against it, who know when mercy should be extended as well as when the penalties of the law should be invoked, and will do what you believe to be just. Very respectfully,

"GARRETT S. VAN WAGONER, Judge."

The jury then retired for a brief session.

GIVES BOND.

The Indictment Against Henry A. Newman.

Governor Crittenden in the City—The Law and Order League—To-Day's Developments.

Henry A. Newman, Commissioner of Labor Statistics of Missouri, arrived from his home in Randolph County this morning on the Wabash railroad, accompanied by two neighbors, Wm. Smith and Walter T. Austin. At 10 o'clock, accompanied by these gentlemen and ex-Senator Sam. Byrnes of Jefferson City, as attorney, he presented himself at the bar of the Criminal Court. The indictment found against him by the last Grand Jury was read to him by Clerk Finney. It is as follows:

"STATE OF MISSOURI, } ss.
CITY OF ST. LOUIS, }

"St. Louis Criminal Court, October Term, 1883.

"The Grand Jurors of the State of Missouri, within and for the body of the City of St. Louis, now here in court duly impaneled, sworn and charged upon their oath, present that Henry A. Newman, late of the city of St. Louis and State aforesaid, on the 20th day of September, in the year of our Lord 1882, at the city of St. Louis aforesaid, being then and there a duly appointed and qualified Notary Public for the city of St. Louis and State of Missouri, and then and there holding and executing the said office of Notary Public under the Constitution and laws of the State of Missouri, did feloniously attempt to grant, bargain and sell to one Benjamin F. Hamfuel, for the price and consideration of $600 to be thereafter paid to him, the said Henry A. Newman, the said office of Notary Public as aforesaid held by him, the said Henry H. Newman." The remainder of the indictment is a reiteration of the same statement, in the form prescribed by law.

Mr. Byrnes, for Newman, said: "We are ready to give bond in this case." The court fixed it at $1,000.

Messrs. Smith and Austin presented certificates that they were worth $40,000 in real estate, and a letter from Circuit Judge Burkhardt vouching for their solvency. The bonds were then signed, and the party left the building at once.

Gov. Crittenden.

Gov. Crittenden came down from Jefferson City this morning and registered as usual at the Southern Hotel. To a POST-DISPATCH reporter, assigned for body-guard duty, as is the custom when his Excellency is in the city, the Governor said: "I have come down here in response to the request of the Prosecuting Attorney of the Court of Criminal Correction, and will appear as a witness to-morrow in the conspiracy cases of Messrs. Lutz, Caruth, Butler and McEntire. In view of the fact that I will be called upon to testify in the courts, I have nothing to say about the action of the Grand Jury."

"Will you appoint a Police Commissioner this week?"

"Now, how can I tell? Let me get one thing off my hands before I take hold of another," and the Governor, smiling amiably as ever, disappeared up the elevator. He had no callers to speak of this morning. None of the indicted put in an appearance.

The Law and Order League.

A reporter of the POST-DISPATCH went out in quest of members of the Law and Order League to ascertain their opinions on the report of the Grand Jury and the probable course to be pursued by the organization in the future. Col. Broadhead, the chairman of the Executive Committee, is out of the city at present, as is also Gen. Noble, one of the leading lights of the league. Mr. Gerard B. Allen, the president of the league, could not be found, but a number of the gentlemen who are members and were prominently identified with the various meetings that have been held, were seen and interviewed. Ex-Gov. Stanard said he did not know the exact course that would be pursued by the Law and Order League. The object of the association was to prosecute vigorously all public officials who were indicted by the Grand Jury for the mal-administration of their offices, and he supposed the league would take suitable action on the report of Saturday.

Mr. Web M. Samuel knew nothing positive of the course that is likely to be pursued by the Law and Order League. He thought the recommendation of the Grand Jury, that the office of police commissioner be made elective and not appointive, a very wise one, and deserving of mature consideration. He never could understand why the power of appointing these officers was vested in the Governor of the State. They were purely local officers, the functions of their offices were local and were paid out of local coffers, hence the people of the city should have some voice in the matter. If the office was to be made appointive the appointing power should be vested in the Circuit Court judges of the city. This would place the matter, in a measure, above the control of any political faction. The police commissioner should be a purely non-political officer, since the oath he takes on assuming the duties of his office embraces a clause that he will not use the influence of his position for any purely political end. If they must represent political parties, he believed in having one-half of the body appointed from each party.

Lieut.-Gov. Campbell was met accidentally, and, in response to an inquiry, said: "Oh, yes, that was a very tart report; but I do not care to make any comment upon it. I will say this, however: it was reported that I went to Kansas City to evade a summons from that grand jury. This was false. I was in the city fully ten days while the jury was in session, and they could have summoned me if they wanted me. While I knew nothing that would aid them in their investigation, still I was perfectly willing to appear before them."

"What about the recommendation of the jury that the pardoning power be vested in a board of pardons?"

"That is absurd. The pardoning power should be in the Executive of the State. A board of pardons is out of the question."

Another gentleman, a very prominent lawyer, speaking on this point, said: "I can see no reason for divesting the Governor of the pardoning power. It is in the right place, and if it is abused, that is the fault of the Governor, and not of the law. It is the duty of the people to look to this, and select the proper man for their chief executive officer. A board of pardons might be corrupted as easily as a governor. The pardoning power of almost every State in the Union is vested in the Executive. In some States it is subject to a few more restrictions than in this, but substantially the provisions of the Constitutions are the same."

Mr. Wilker, the secretary of the Law and Order League, said that there had been no meeting of the League or its committees since the report of the Grand Jury, hence no further action had been taken than that already published. Messrs. Lodge, Bliss and Kent had been employed to assist in the prosecution of all municipal officers who were indicted. The subscription list of the League had increased materially of late. Circulars had been sent out to a large number of citizens and the membership list was rapidly being filled. As to the report of the Grand Jury he thought it a very hot document. He believed the Police Commissioners should be elected and not appointed by the Governor.

Mr. Joseph G. Lodge, the principal attorney employed by the League, said that it was a mistake to suppose that the object of the association was to ferret out conspiracies or hunt up testimony for grand juries that would lead to the conviction of city officials who were using their offices for corrupt purposes. He and his associates were employed simply to assist in the prosecution of those who were indicted, and through the courtesy of the Circuit Attorney they expected to take an active part in the trials of all those implicated in the late police muddle.

The general sentiment on 'Change and among the merchants about town was that the POST-DISPATCH had performed an invaluable service for the city in bringing to light the secrets of this infamous ring, and with one accord they could exclaim, "Let the good work go bravely on!"

JOHN O'BRIEN DEAD.

An Extraordinary Character—Veteran Member of the Troy, N. Y., Bar.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

TROY, N. Y., November 5.—Yesterday afternoon the remains of John O'Brien, the veteran member of the bar who died on Friday at the Marshall Infirmary in this city, were consigned to earth in the old St. Mary's Cemetery. The old lawyer, had a very mysterious and romantic history. He was born sixty-three years ago in Ireland, his father being a priest, whose liason with a lady of high rank created much excitement at the time. His mother, a Protestant, kept his birth a secret. He was tenderly cared for and provided with all the luxuries of life, and when he was 19 years old was sent to this country. He was sent to Cazenovia College, in the central part of this State, and received a monthly remittance of $25. It was intended that he should enter the ministry, but he refused to do so, as he had a strong leaning towards the Catholic Church. He left college and went to Utica, and the remittances from Ireland ceased about the same time. He

CONCLUDED THAT HIS MOTHER,

whom he had seen several times, and for whom he had a strong affection, was dead. While in Utica he fell in love with a beautiful young girl, but broke the engagement because she wanted to be married in a Protestant church. Afterward he greatly regretted this step, and it cast a shadow of sadness over his whole bachelor life. He left Utica and came to this city, where he was admitted to the bar. One evening in winter, while sitting in his office, he was surprised to find a woman standing before him dressed in black. She told him she was born of noble parents, but had been cast adrift, and wanted to hear the details of his own birth. He refused to tell her, and the woman left. About three weeks afterwards the community was startled by a terrible tragedy, in which a woman, known as the "veiled murderess," performed a prominent part. A few days after the woman had been arrested, Constable Kipp called on him, and, showing him a handkerchief marked with the initials "O'B.", asked him whether it was his? The constable stated that he had found it in

POSSESSION OF THE "VEILED MURDERESS."

Mr. O'Brien denied having owned the handkerchief, but after the constable was gone examined his wardrobe, and found in fact that one of his handkerchiefs so marked was missing. He then remembered that his clothes had come from the laundry on the night of the visit from the mysterious woman in black. He had no doubt that she had taken the handkerchief from the open bundle, which was close to where she had been sitting, and that she was no other than the "veiled murderess." Fearful of being mixed up in the trial, he kept the fact a secret until long afterwards. For many years he was a regular attendant at the Police Court. He was always attired in black broadcloth, with a coat buttoned to his chin, and more than anything else, attracted the attention of the curious, who saw in the man a character of an extraordinary kind. Although in later years he was reduced to extremes he was nevertheless proud to the last, and when his friends intimated that a collection among members of the bar could he easily obtained, he exclaimed, "For heaven's sake don't do that. I don't want them to know anything about that."

HIS PECULIAR DRESS,

TRACKED TO THEIR DOOR.

The Probable Murderers of the Princeton, Wis., Boy Arrested.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., November 5.—A Princeton, Wis., dispatch, says: "Mrs. Ellen Long, a widow, and L. S. Whittemore, father of the boy found in the river with his throat cut, have been arrested for murder. The detectives who took the case had their suspicions turned to Mrs. Long, because of rumors that she once attempted to poison Whittemore's wife and failed. Searching her house they found bloody clothes, which she had been wearing up to the time of the murder, and a butcher knife and two razors stained with blood. In a well on the premises was found a club with blood marks. The neighbors say that criminal intimacy existed between the widow and Whittemore and that it was known to her son, who was probably thus disposed of to stop a scandal. The boy was missing ten days but the father made little effort to find him. The theory is that the boy was killed by Mrs. Long in her cellar and that the father carried the body to the river and hid it in the place where he pretended to first discover it ten days later. Mrs. Long is a daughter of ex-County Judge A. H. Myers.

MLLE. VAN ZANDT.

Who It Was That Attempted to Assassinate the Prima Donna.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, November 5.—A special cablegram from Paris says: "The public was startled yesterday by the report that Mlle. Van Zandt, the American prima donna, had been attacked on returning from the Opera Comique Friday night by an insane lover, who had followed her footsteps for months. He threatened to throw vitriol upon her a month ago and her residence on Rue Lincoln, a few doors from the Champs Elysees, has been guarded by two commissaires of police. The lover, it appears, attended the opera on Friday night, listened to Mlle. Van Zandt, and left before the end of the performance. He appeared in front of her residence before midnight, and his suspicious movements were watched by the police. They challenged him and he replied that his business was none of theirs. The police then secreted themselves. Mlle. Van Zandt arrived at her house at midnight, and sprang lightly from her coupe. At the same moment, the would-be lover sprang forward and with one hand while he had the other in his breast. Mlle. Van Zandt gave a startled scream and fled into the house, dropping her slippers in the street in her flight. Her coachman, who was armed with a revolver, drew the weapon and covered the man. He would have shot him dead, but the police sprang on him and pinned him to the ground, after a short struggle, and took him to the station. A six-shooter was found in his inside breast pocket ready for instant use. Mlle. Van Zandt doubtless had a narrow escape. She was quite prostrated yesterday. Your correspondent found her to-day entirely recovered. She said she was thoroughly frightened, but expressed the greatest sympathy for the demented lover. She had in her flight only time to observe that he was a very handsome fellow and had an appealing face. At his examination yesterday, so Mlle. Van Zandt told me, he said: "I love her and she loves me.

ATTEMPTED TO CLUTCH HER

SHE SINGS TO ME

in the theater. I know she loves me." He begged, with tears falling down his cheeks, to see her. It appears that he first saw her at Monte Carlos last winter and had followed her ever since. His name is Merac and he is 30 years of age. He is married and has a daughter 13 years old. He is perfectly sane on every subject except Mlle. Van Zandt. The prisoner will be taken to the infirmary to-morrow and examined.

BROKEN HEADS AND GLASS.

A Street Row in Philadelphia and Its Serious Results.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, November 5.—An electioneering row occurred to-day up town, near Willow street, in which several men and women were badly injured. It grew out of bad feeling at the last coroner's convention, when two politicians and an ex-politician, Frank Carroll, had a rough and tumble fight with Dennis Kelly, a rounder. To-day Carroll went with his gang to Kelly's house, called him out, and after throwing him down, cut him badly with a knife. Mrs. Cuff, in front of whose house the fight occurred, cried "Murder!" which drew a crowd, and the Carroll gang then knocked her down and beat her. By this time Kelly's gang appeared on the scene and began a serious fight with bricks, stones and clubs.

OUTSIDERS JOINED IN

and many heads as well as all the windows in the neighborhood were broken. A thousand people witnessed the fight, and there was consequently great excitement. A squad of police came and dispersed the mob. Kelly and his brother were badly cut. John Dougherty received what may be a mortal wound. John and Thomas Dauphy, brothers, were badly cut. Carroll was also badly used up. He and his gang escaped the police. Many others received cuts.

MURDERED HIS MISTRESS.

A Black Woman Shot Dead by Her Lover at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, PENN., November 5.—Hubbard Milton, colored, shot and fatally wounded his mistress, Annie Hunter, in a Franklin street bagnio, a few minutes before 12 o'clock last night. Milton was very jealous, and, during the evening, the couple quarreled about another man's ring, which the woman had in her possession. About 11:45 they retired to their room, and ten minutes later the other inmates of the house were startled by three pistol-shots in quick succession. All rushed to Milton's room, where Annie Hunter was found lying unconscious on the bed, with two pistol wounds in the left side of her head and one in the right. Medical aid was summoned, but it was of no avail, as the woman died at 3:40 this morning. The murderer, after committing the deed, jumped from a third-story window to a shed, and thence to the ground, but was captured several hours later, just outside of the city limits.

Lost in the Arctic Ocean.

BOSTON, November 5.—The whaling bark Louise was lost September 22 in the Arctic Ocean, by striking ice. Six men perished. The captain and chief officer arrived at San Francisco yesterday in the bark Francis Palmer.

Upton's Suggestion.

WASHINGTON, November 5.—Mr. Upton, Second Comptroller of Currency, in his annual report suggests statute limitation on war claims. This he thinks would effectively prohibit any claim agent or attorney from presenting claims, as has heretofore been done, without even an attempt to ascertain whether they were meritorious.

Dad's Dollars.

WASHINGTON, November 5.—The issue of standard dollars for the week ending November 3 amounts to 371,499, against 1,043,000 for the corresponding period last year.

The McCullough Boom.

Mr. Thos. W. Fitch, the projector and chairman of the McCullough reception committee, which met at the Southern Hotel on Saturday evening, was on 'Change this morning, and met with very decided encouragement in advancing the objects of the meeting, and the affair is bound to be an enormous success.

At the Southern Hotel meeting on Saturday night the following were present: Wm. H. Thompson, John W. Norton, Charles E. Barney, Judge E. Noonan, Thomas W. Fitch, Judge Jones, Morrison Renshaw, Dr. McPheeters, Frank Ridgely, Wm. C. Steigers, Capt. John M. Boffinger, W. F. Nolker and others. All of these gentlemen are members of the Elks organization, except one, Messrs. Barney, Noonan and Garret made remarks and a committee was appointed to urge Mr. McCullough's acceptance of the reception.

On Trial for His Life.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon the work of selecting a jury to try Edward Rickard for the third time for the murder of Selina Wilson in 1881, was commenced in the Criminal Court. Charles P. Johnson, Jay L. Torrey and Robert Kehten appear for Rickard. On the first trial he was convicted of murder in the first degree. The second trial resulted in a hung jury. It will be remembered that Rickard shot and killed the woman he boarded with, at 707 Chestnut street, because she would not go to a ball with him, so the State alleges. He pleads accidental discharge of the weapon.

The Boy Died.

Charles Brewer, the boy run over by a car of the South St. Louis Railway, at Eighth and Barton streets, on Thursday last, died at 2417 Menard street this morning. The coroner is holding an inquest this afternoon.

ELECTIONS TO-MORROW.

Apathy Existing Among the Department Clerks at Washington.

Very Few of Them Will Go Home to Vote—An Unprecedented Interest Being Manifested in Virginia—The Situation in New York—Speculation as to the Probable Result Everywhere.

Special Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 5.—The elections of to-morrow are the principal topic here to-day. All eyes are on the doubtful states. In the departments there is fear and trembling. There is a feeling with many that the end is at hand. Yet, strange as it may appear, and it is strange, few seem to be going home to vote. It is very evident that, sap what they may about their former payments of money and their trips home to vote being voluntary, they were not. The civil service has taken the lash from their backs. Some of them have given money for this campaign and a few will go home to vote, but they are few. It is a little odd that, with the fear of defeat staring them in the face, and a knowledge that defeat next year means a loss of position,—and some of them look upon this as next to the loss of life—that thereshould be so much apparent apathy. Perhaps it is the relaxation which follows as a sequence to the bondage from which the civil service bill released them.

MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

are attracting more attention here than any other of the many states that vote to-morrow. Of course, those in the departments who are voters there go home to vote. The states are so near that there is little excuse for staying away, and the nearness causes the enthusiasm in the States to become contagious. In Virginia the contest is to be a desperate one. Say what they may of Mahone, he is a thorough organizer, and he has his forces well in hand. His voters will be marched to the polls with such military precision that not a man of them will escape. There are the old stories over again of tissue ballots by thousands ready for immediate use, and other stories of bands of drilled repeaters, and parties of colored men who are to be run in from North Carolina and Tennessee. How much truth there is in all this cannot be told, but it is pretty safe to bet that Mahone will carry the State. Dezendorf has gone to Virginia—he resides here now, doing a private banking business—and will lead the "Straight-outs" in the fight against Mahone and the Democrats. If the should by any chance be united before the election of next year, the State would be Republican in the Presidential election of 1884.

REPUBLICANS OF VIRGINIA

Outlook in Virginia.

PETERSBURG, VA., November 5.—Interest in the election to-morrow is unprecedented throughout the State. Both parties are determined to bring out their full voting strength. A number of leading merchants here have notified the public, through the papers, that they will keep their places of business closed to-morrow to give their employes an opportunity to vote and remain at the poll during the day. Col. J. D. Brady, chairman of the Republican State Committee, claims that the Coalitionists will carry Virginia on a popular vote of 15,000 majority; that they will poll ninety-five per cent of the colored vote, and if the Readjusters stand firm there does not seem to be any doubt of the result. Mr. Brady stated further that the Coalitionists will have twenty majority in the House of Delegates and four in the Senate.

We'll Take His Word for It.

NEW YORK, November 5.—E. B. Haskell, editor of the Boston Herald, writes the Mail and Express of this city that Gen. Butler will be defeated by from 10,000 to 25,000 votes.

Wm. T. Croasdale, editor of the Day, says: "There is not any doubt of the election of the Democratic State officers, and the Legislature will be Democratic on joint ballot. The State Senate, however, will be very close, as it happens a majority of the holding-over Senators are Republicans."

The Situation in New York.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, November 5.—The WORLD this morning publishes several columns of interviews with prominent politicians regarding the election in this State to-morrow. The Democrats are confident and enthusiastic while the Republicans are despondent and lukewarm.

Womau Will Work.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., November 5.—The members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union have decided to turn out to-morrow and work at the polls in favor of the Prohibitionist ticket.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION, CLOSING AT 1 P. M.

Toledo's stocks this morning were 1,905,818 bu wheat, 146,589 bu corn and 100,063 bu oats, an increase of 136,000 bu in wheat, 9,600 bu in corn and 13,800 bu in oats over last Monday.——The Southwestern Miller has the following, translated from Pappenheim's Murker-Zeitung: "It is every day becoming clearer that sooner or later the wheat of India will attain a good standing in the trade marts of the world, and enter into close competition with that produced in America. This seems all the more probable from the fact that, as regards quality, recent observations made in England have placed it at least on an equality with American wheat. It is not unworthy of note that at the oriental museum in Vienna an introductory report on Indian wheat was lately made to the presiding officer. As this report shows, the total area of land under wheat in India in the spring of 1883, according to official statistics, amounted to 21,340,000 acres. The average yield per acre is calculated at twelve mauds, so that the total amount of the year's harvest is expected to amount to 256,092,000 mauds (310,414,545 bus). According to the report of the Indian bureau of trade, which was recently placed before the oriental museum, there will be available for export in the current year (1883 to 1884) in all India from 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 cwts. of wheat. How much of this amount will in fact be shipped depends on the iquiry and the prices current in England. Up to July of the present year the English demand has not been so great as during the same period of the previous year. As regards the cost of production, the report holds that it is much cheaper than in America. If until the present time the wheat of India has attained no good standing in the world's trade, the deficiency is due to the lack of railway communication with the centers of trade, and to the high freight rates in comparison with those of America, which the Indian railways charge. The Indian government has of late turned its attention to the improvement of wheat culture and the furtherance of wheat exports, and the expectation is not groundless that ere long there will be a rapid increase in the export of Indian wheat."——Stocks of grain in New York to-day were 8,659,837 bu wheat, 4,233,474 bu corn, 2,789,511 bu oats, and 583,337 bu rye. Compared with last Monday shows a decrease of 34,000 bu in wheat, and 32,000 bu in rye, and an increase of 479,000 bu in corn and 78,600 bu in oats. Last year the stock (including that afloat) was 4,940,000 bu wheat, 310,000 bu corn, 1,960,000 bu oats and 176,000 bu rye.—To-day one year ago the stock of wheat in Toledo was 654,000 bu, of corn 79,000 bu, and of oats 89,000 bu——Carruthers & Allen, of New York, in their latest circular, have a cut that truly represents the situation in wheat at present. Two hands are shown flipping up coppers, "Heads or tails." In their remarks C. & A. say: "Foreign markets will have to improve radically before the exporters can sell there on a legitimate basis, and ocean freights are so scarce that any movement of consequence would put them out of sight. The outlook for an active market or a permanent advance is not very encouraging. In a few short months the West will be speculating on a new crop, and it will go hard with the bulls to continue paying the premiums on the futures."—Ocean rates from New Orleans are reported 1d higher at 6d per bushel.—A late English cable to S. W. Cobb & Co., says: "Red winter wheat, glutted; Russian and Indian wheat cannot be sold. Continental markets dull."

For speculation read scalping. That is about what grain future trading has resolved itself down to. There are no features of interest in the market, very few orders are received, and speculative operations are now confined chiefly to making a scalp of ½ cent or so out of the market, either on the long or the short side; it don't make much difference which side to the bull or the bear now. The wheat market was fearfully stupid most of to-day. Rain here and in Chicago, as well as in certain sections west, produced a stiffer feeling early that was intensified somewhat by firmer and higher English cables. The consequence was an advance in the Western markets, and New York and other Eastern points received a shove upward in price through sympathy with these higher prices in the West. But after the first advance, interest seemed to die out, and subsequently and up to close of the noon call the markets were very dull and prices sagged down. Here in St. Louis December opened at $1 02⅝, January at $1 04⅞, February at $1 06⅞, and May at $1 10⅝. January then selling off to $1 04⅝, but soon recovering to $1 04⅞. From this there was the sinking in values alluded to above, and December sold off to $1 02⅝@1 06⅝, January to $1 04⅛, February at $1 06½, and May to $1 10⅝@1 10½, the lowest rates being paid on noon call. The usual late reaction then struck the market. Chicago went climbing up until 98 was reached for January and $1 05 for May, and this at once flurried all the other markets. There was a rush to buy here that carried prices up stiffly—to $1 02⅞ for December, $1 05 for January, $1 06⅞@1 07 for February, and $1 10⅞@1 11 for May, but at the top rates there were pretty free sellers. The close was firm and at advances of ⅝@⅝ over Saturday's close. Corn started in strong, and sold up ⅜ in a short time, the rainy and mild weather in the West, together with higher and firm cables and moderate receipts, improving the demand and causing sellers to hold off or ask higher rates. Chicago went up ½c, but the Eastern markets showed little change, and after the first wants of buyers were filled a weaker tone developed. The year option attracted most attention, opening at 42¼@42⅜, and going up to 42⅛, but dropped shortly to 42¼, November meanwhile selling at 44⅜ to 44¼, December at 42⅝ to 42⅛, June at 42 to 41⅞, and May at 45 to 45⅛. After the noon call the stiff advance in wheat and reactions in other markets started an urgent demand that forced prices up sharply, except in January, which showed a weak front by comparison, and at close was only ⅛ up, while other options were ⅝@1⅛ above Saturday's close. Oats opened steady, and then weakened off ⅛@¼, but late May stiffened up and at close was ⅛@¼ above Saturday. Cash No. 2 red wheat was steadily maintained in value and sold fairly to order buyers, millers and speculators, but other grades were a fraction lower and quiet. Cash grades of corn did not bring the rates paid last Saturday and the demand was rather slack. Cash oats were weaker, but in fair order and feeding request.

Rye was dull and unchanged, a single car No. 2 on E. side selling at 52 and that the extent of business. On this side No. 2 was probably worth 51½ and rejected 48½@49.

Barley showed no change. Offerings were liberal and brewers bought considerable, looking for best qualities mainly. We quote: Rejected 30@35; No. 3 40@45; prime 50@55; strictly prime 60; choice 60@70; fancy 75@80.

Flour—Unchanged and exceedingly dull, with no demand to speak of from any class of buyers. Prices were about steady with a leaning towards firmness, in sympathy with wheat. We quote—the inside price on strong grades and outside lots between grades: Extra fancy $5 20@5 45; fancy $4 95@5 05; choice $4 55@4 65; family $4 00@4 15; xxx $3 50@3 65; xx $3 15@3 25; x $2 80@2 95; superfine $2 55@2 75; fine $2 25@2 30; patent $5 65@6 40. Cornmeal—Unchanged at $2 20@2 25 on order demand; pearl meal grits and hominy $3 40@3 50.

Rye Flour—Quiet at $3 50@3 70 delivered.

Millfeed—Quiet and unchanged. Sacked bran 62 this side, 61½@62½ E. track, 59 at country points; bulk bran 53@54 this side, 54@54½ at country points.

Hay—Receipts were larger and the market for low and medium grades timothy and mixed was even worse than it has been, most buyers offering lower rates and indifferent even then about purchasing. Prairie and the best qualities of timothy continued in feeding demand and readily commanded steady prices. We quote: This side—Prairie $9@10 for prime to strictly prime; $10 00@11 00 for choice to fancy—outside for Kansas; mixed $8@12 for common to choice; timothy $12@16, top rate for fancy. East side—50c@$1 per ton lower than baove rates.

Provisions showed a stiffer tone, this being especially seen in bacon, which was in demand and sold freely. Pork sold higher at $10 85 to $11 10, and was in better request. Prime steam lard was worth 7⅛ and prime kettle sold at 8. Dry salt meats were firm, though there was some "cutting" of prices, longs bringing 6.55@6⅝ and c'ribs at 6⅝@6¾. Bacon c'ribs sold packed at 7.60@7⅝, and shorts at 7¾@7.80 packed and 7½@7.60 loose; shoulders were worth 5o; no longs offering on the market. Hams 15@16. Lead was duller than ever. New York is down to $4 for common, and this has rather a depressing effect here, causing buyers to hold off. Refined can be bought at $3 85 delivered, and hard at $3 80, but there seems to be no demand.

Grass Seeds—Market generally slow and quiet, but little seed of any kind offering. We quote timothy at $1 20@1 27½, with sale of 165 sks at $1 25; clover steady at $5@5 25, with one sale at the outside figure; red top unchanged at 40@45c.

Flaxseed—Steady at $1 34@1 34½; small lot at $1 34.

Hemp Seed—Nominally unchanged at $1 50.

Castor Beans—Quiet at $1 75 for pure.

Cotton.

At Liverpool the market for spot cotton, although easier, was not quotably lower. New Orleans also was unchanged, but New York and the home market were both 1-16 off and quiet, although reported sales in this market were 1,161 bales. In futures prices took quite a drop all round, but at New York showed a tendency to advance towards the close, and at the 2:30 p. m. call was 2 to 6 points below the close on Saturday. To-morrow being a holiday, on account of the State election, there will be no reports from this market. Liverpool futures opened flat and closed weak at a decline, while New Orleans was easy and lower at a decline, like New York, the decline, however, not being so strongly marked. The closing prices at latter place were partly a point lower.

CATTLE—The fresh arrivals, with what remained over from last week, made but a small supply—hardly sufficient to meet the local demand, which was active from the start. Native cattle of any description was scarce, there only being a few cows and mixed lots, the proportion of really good being small. Range cattle were also offered in small numbers, the bulk of the arrivals being composed of Southwest cattle, the most of which was consigned to one firm. The general market was quiet and without any new features. Prices were possibly a little stronger, owing to the limited supply and general good demand from butchers and local dealers, but not enough to warrant any change in the quotations, which are firm and steady at the following:

HOGS—This morning and as long as the rather limited supply held out, ruled active and largely higher. All classes of buyers, with the single exception of shippers, were eager purchasers and paid prices asked readily. Indeed, sales were made so easily that all that was required of a salesman was to show what he had and the sale was soon made. Billy Menzie, buyer for the East St. Louis Packing and Provision Company, took hold freely, everything apparently bring "fish to his net," and yet he was not fully supplied. Redmond, of Whittaker & Co., had orders to buy but the supply would not justify his entering into competition with Menzie, who had "blood in his eye." Butchers were also free purchasers, and between them and the packers the arrivals were soon cleaned up, at a range from $4 40@4 85 for rough to good mixed—including lights—packers, and $4 75@4 90 for butchers. Although these prices were very gratifying to salesmen they were prone to look upon the advance as merely temporary, due to the general good demand and small run. Reports from above were by no means encouraging, on the contrary they were of a character to bear prices instead of bulling them.

IF anything gets away from the present Grand Jury it will not be for any omission in the charge of the Judge.

THE ethics of police commissionerdom are puzzling, but as far as we can make out gambling must be permitted and sparring must be prohibited.

THE general impression is that the work of the late Grand Jury in indicting the ring will not stick. The work of the POST-DISPATCH in publishing the testimony against them will stick.

ALL of the department reports call for an increase of the clerical force. It might be worth while trying—merely as an experiment, you know—it might be worth while trying to make the clerks do a month's work for a month's pay.

THE evidences are that JOHN MCCULLOUGH will receive such a welcome on his return to St. Louis as will keep his heart warm all winter. The time and place for such a welcome are in the theater, and when he appears on his opening night.

THE report of the Director of the Mint shows that we coined during the past year $35,936,927 in gold and $28,835,470 in silver, and that the Government's net profits on silver coinage foot up a total of $16,860,310 in five years. He estimates the yield of our gold mines during the current year at $32,000,000, and of our silver mines at $49,000,000. The estimated circulation of coin October 1, 1883, was $544,512,699 of gold and $235,291,323 of silver.

WE shall very much regret it if our esteemed contemporary, the Globe-Democrat, does not join heartily in the movement to give Gen. SHERMAN a reception. We are aware that a difference of opinion has arisen between the ex-General of the Army and the editor of the Globe-Democrat over a question of historical accuracy, but this does not obscure the value of SHERMAN'S public services nor the brilliancy of his career, which constitute his claim on our recognition. St. Louis has a reputation for generous and appreciative hospitality, and the eyes of the country are on us.

THE finding of MARY CHURCHILL, leading a contented but unromantic life of industry over the ironing board, is a happy ending to a story which at one time threatened to end most sadly. It is all the more welcome, because it gives us assurance that the runaway trick is played out. Young ladies who may cherish any lingering desires of creating a sensation by running away will probably abandon their desire before the conviction that the public will hereafter take only a languid interest in the loveliest and most romantic fugitive. If this consideration is not sufficient, we are confident that no young woman will enter upon a career of sensation in which the sensation consists in wielding a flat-iron in an asylum laundry for $12 a month and board.

IT is not necessary to say many words about the indictments found against Mr. MOORE and Mr. WHITE, of this paper, for taking away the note books of the Grand Jury testimony. The offence may have been a technical contempt of court, but it certainly was nothing more, and the judge who was called on to deal with the contempt case said that, inasmuch as the note books had been voluntarily returned in good condition, he did not care about proceeding further in the matter. There the case should have ended. Every man in his senses knows that the idea of larceny would never have been thought of if the notes had not been published, so that the real offense is not taking the books but publishing the testimony. Publishing the testimony given before a Grand Jury may be a crime, but it is not a crime which can be punished as larceny, and in the present case it is a crime which has been of singular assistance to the cause of justice. It is only justice to Mr. MOORE and to Mr. WHITE to give them the benefit of their high personal character, and to assure the public that not even their zeal for news would have permitted them to aid in publishing the secret testimony before the Grand Jury if it had involved any act of criminality or had threatened to interfere with the cause of justice. There is no doubt that their enterprise struck the ring a heavier blow than was dealt by the Grand Jury, whose notes they secured for publication.

TO-MORROW'S ELECTIONS.

The result of to-morrow's elections is a matter of universal interest, because of the influence it may have on Congress this winter and on the Presidential election next year.

Of the ten States involved in this election, only Massachusetts, Maryland, Minnesota and New Jersey elect Governors.

The furious efforts of the Republicans to redeem Massachusetts by beating BUTLER, and the presentiment that his election will make him a very important, if not a dangerous, factor in the Presidential problem, concentrate most of the interest on Massachusetts. It is a close and doubtful race, but in view of his large plurality last year the chances seem to be in favor of BUTLER.

The Republicans opened the campaign in New Jersey with strong hopes of electing their nominee for Governor, Judge DIXON of the State Supreme Court, but he refused to resign that office and the Democratic nominee, ABBETT, has made such an able and vigorous canvass that there is little doubt about his election.

In Maryland the Democratic nominee for Governor is ex-Congressman MCLANE, a strong and good man, about whose election there should have been no doubt. But, unfortunately, there has been some ring business in Maryland affairs which has disgusted many Democrats, and the Republicans have nominated against him Congressman HOLTON, who carried a Baltimore district last year by 1,500 in the face of an adverse majority of 1,500. Still, all the indications point to MCLANE'S election by a small majority.

Minnesota is expected to go Republican, as usual.

Next to Massachusetts, Virginia presents the most doubtful and bitter contest, and the result in Virginia is at least second in importance to that of the Massachusetts election. There is a prospect of MAHONE'S defeat, which would leave the Republicans without hope of getting a single electoral vote in the South in exchange for their great losses elsewhere. But if MAHONE succeeds, there is a prospect that his success will only aggravate the troubles and dissensions that are crushing the Republican party. In Virginia, as in Connecticut and Mississippi, the election is only for members of the Legislature.

In Nebraska, Pennsylvania and New York the election is for subordinate State officers. The former is conceded to the Republicans, as usual, and in Pennsylvania there is so much indifference on both sides that neither interest nor significance attaches to the result. In New York there is the customary war among the city factions of the Democratic party, but the Republicans are afflicted with more serious troubles and will hardly be able to overcome the tremendous Democratic majority of last year.

THE DEMOCRATIC PRESS.

More comments from the Democratic papers of Missouri in another column indicate that it will take some time to subject them to the discipline which has brought demoralization and defeat upon the Republican party. They do not seem to be indoctrinated with Major EDWARDS' imperialistic views to any great extent, nor are they willing to regard the party as an organized band of James Boys, bound by horrible oaths and fearful penalties to stand by each other in a league of crime.

On the contrary, instead of holding that every Democratic criminal has a sort of feudal claim on them for support and protection, or that they can serve their party best by ignoring, apologizing for or defending the mistakes or misfeasances of Democrats in office, they recognize the fact that it will be strong in proportion to the assurance it gives the people of a will to protect them from unfaithful officials and abusers of public trusts.

Too long in power, the Republican party fell into the official habit of scorning or trifling with popular demands for purity in the public service. This gave the Democratic party an opportunity to figure conspicuously as the representative of a growing popular desire for a change to better methods of administration and a stricter accountability on the part of public servants. It is in this role that the Democratic party has carried twenty-six States, and now has every prospect of carrying the Union next year.

It is enough to provoke any loyal Democrat to see a Democratic Governor in Missouri at this time imitating all the worst faults of General GRANT'S system of machine policy and personal government. The Democratic papers that denounce it are not speaking a moment too soon, for they have borne enough. As the Kansas City Times, the Sedalia Democrat and other strong party papers have loudly complained, they have seen the Constitution and laws of our great State trampled under the feet of JAY GOULD without a murmur of protest from Jefferson City. They have seen the State compelled to pay a large amount because the Administration chose to deposit the H. & St. Joe's payment of $3,000,000 with bankers, instead of investing it, as the law plainly commanded. They have seen the public sense of propriety defiantly outraged in numerous appointments, and they have heard of offices bartered for gold or ring influence, while the pardoning power has notoriously been used to save hired assassins from the gallows and professional felons from the Penitentiary.

The fact that the Democratic press of the State has refused to acquiesce silently in this sort of administration, is the best vindication of the party's spirit and of that popular confidence in it which is about to elect a Democratic President.

A Capable Young Man.

From the Spectator.

This is a portrait of Mr. Henry W. Moore, of the POST-DISPATCH. He is responsible for two or three very remarkable "scoops," made by that journal recently, and has taken rank as one of the most wide-awake and thorough-going newspaper men in the country. Mr. Moore is an Englishman by birth, though he was educated in Germany. He also lived for a year or so in Paris, and speaks both French and German fluently. His attainments are quite varied, not the least being his ability as a dramatic critic, which he plainly shows as "Caradoc" in the Spectator. He is not of a robust build, physically, but is as tough as a pine knot, doing more work than three ordinary newspaper men. In fact, his capacity for pure, unceasing, intellectual labor is wonderful. Mr. Moore came to St. Louis about five years ago, and at first worked as a shorthand reporter. Then he took a place on the old Evening Post, at a salary of $15 per week. He is now one of the best paid newspaper men in the city, and earns all he receives. At this writing it is rumored that Mr. Moore has been indicted by the Grand Jury for publishing some of the evidence taken in the Police Board scandal by the Grand Jury preceding the present one. An indictment of that kind is one that all energetic newspaper men covet.

POLITICAL DRIFT.

FREDERICK DOUGLASS is campaigning in the Maryland County of Talbot, the county of his birth.

GOVERNOR FOSTER of Ohio does not seem to be in any hurry about his Thanksgiving proclamation.

MAHONITES openly boast that "if we do not beat you on next Tuesday, we will beat you Tuesday night or Wednesday."

MAHONE is out in an address which shows that he feels that the white vote is leaving him. His paper is full of insolent mendacity.

FRANK HATTON has been violently alluded to by a sacrilegious paper of Philadelphia as "the wharf rat of the administration."

MR. BEECHER is inclined to believe that Butler will be elected in Massachusetts, and that he will be the next Democratic nominee for the Presidency.

DENYING and covering up official rascality is what the Massachusetts Republicans call "protecting the honor of our beloved commonwealth."

MR. MAHONE of Virginia may die before the end of another year. If he does, the Detroit Free Press promises him that he will miss hearing himself spoken of as "that Mahone who was crushed flat."

EX-GOVERNOR THROCKMORTON of Texas, now a member of Congress from that State, is in favor of Mr. Carlisle or some other revenue-reform candidate for Speaker, and believes that the tariff question should be agitated in Congress this winter as a party measure.

WENDELL PHILLIPS declares that Benjamin F. Butler "has followed more closely than any other Massachusetts politician in the steps of Charles Sumner," a declaration which he follows up with the statement that virtue has gone out of the Republican party, and "it lies rotting—mere 'carrion.'"

THE Hartford, Connecticut, Evening Post, (Rep.) reports a conversation with "a leading Democrat" in which he gives currency to a rumor that Governor Waller of that State is making efforts to capture the Connecticut delegation to the National Democratic Convention, with a view of being a candidate for Vice-President on a ticket with a Western man at the head.

FOR absolute fealty to party commend us to the Greenville (S. C.) News, which recently said of General Butler: "He is a type of all that is mean, false, brutal and despicable in man," and that "there is not a criminal in any penitentiary in the country who does not deserve public confidence and esteem better than Butler." And yet it added: "If by any freak of insanity a Democratic convention should nominate him for President we would support him, because this paper is Democratic and will always be loyal to its party."

MEN OF NOTE.

JUDAH P. BENJAMIN expects to return to America to reside.

CHARLEY ROSS is a reporter in the British Parliament, and has been there for years.

THERE are symptoms that American lecture-goers will not go crazy over Matthew Arnold.

MATTHEW ARNOLD says "lectyah" for "lecture." The pronounciation of a poet is born, not made.

RICARDO, the famous ministrel impersonator of female characters, is dead. His name was Thomas Foley.

THE REV. C. C. BURNETT has sued the Council Bluffs Globe for libel, becaus that journal called him "a reverend puppy."

MR. TILDEN'S $40,000 dining-room is at last completed, and it is understood that Mr. Tilden has given orders to bring in the pie.

VANDERBILT has become stoop-shouldered. Giving nickels to little beggars will put the best of us somewhat out of shape.

MR. BLAINE acknowledges that stenographers are useful, but in composition requiring close thought he prefers to do his own writing.

KARL LANGENBERG is wanted. His brother, Gustave, has come from Dusseldorf to tell him that Frau Rochoch, their aunt, is dead, and that she willed them jointly $200,000.

PATRICK DELANY, whose inventions in telegraphy are attracting attention, was a Western Union messenger boy in Hartford a few years ago.

THE METROPOLITAN PRESS.

What the Editors of the New York Journals Are Saying To-Day.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, November 5.—The WORLD says: "The conflict between the races at Danville, Va., has created intense indignation at Richmond, and at a great mass meeting last night the responsibility was placed upon Mahone and his followers, and they were so scathingly denounced that it is doubtful whether the political prospects of the very small Readjuster would sell for three cents on the dollar."

THE SUN.

The Sun says: "The log-rolling arrangement of the advocate of the Hennepin Canal job and the supporters of the various Mississippi River jobs, is said to have excited the envy and emulation of the promoters of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal job, who wish it to be known that this enterprise is also open to offers. The result of these preliminary bargains may be to give Congress at its coming session two or three river and harbor bills instead of one. Besides the omnibus measure which gathers up appropriations for all sorts of streams, from Cheesequakes Creek to the Tchefuncte, there will probably be sundry schemes, involving too many millions to be risked in the bill and requiring separate legislation. The fact that any measure is engineered by a log-rolling combination should be enough to kill it."

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "If the Washington Sunday Capital has an editor, and that seems a doubtful point, he is far too modest for this world. He has invented a remarkable scheme for turning the country upside down politically. Broadly stated, his plan is to make the Northern Republican States reliably Democratic by disgusting them through an open and intimate alliance between the national administration and the Mahone Readjusters and then to make the South Republican by the judicious use of money in the most promising States. And this unselfish man says that the plan is not his, but the President's."

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune says: "Republicans are not tired of their principles. They believe just what they did about the slave and the rebellion, about the need of a free vote and an honest count, about bonds, banks and dollars; about public honor. But there are some who fancy that all these things belong to a past with which they now have nothing to do. They are tired of beating the Democratic party and wish it would take itself out of the way. If it only would, then the citizens would like to vote about some new thing. When they come to the edge of the precipice next year they will refuse to vote away all the past. Then they will see that the Democratic party is not out of the way, but is just what it was. But now they see not much and lag a great deal. They are tempted to be cipher citizens for once."

THE HERALD.

The Herald says: "Next to the charm of the romances of Alexander Dumas, the elder, for the country in whose language they were written, they have given more pleasure to this generation of Americans and to that which preceded it than to any other people in the world. No romance writer of our own nationality, and none of the English speech, save only Dickens, has had so many delighted readers in the United States. Nor is the interest ephemeral. There are millions of Americans who will take as great satisfaction in the public honors paid to the memory of Dumas yesterday in Paris, as the most enthusiastic of his own countrymen."

THE GOVERNOR.

What the Democratic Papers are Still Saying About Him.

Tom's Crowd.

From the Sedalia Democrat.

"Why," says the Kansas City Times, "does not a mass meeting convene at St. Louis to indorse Governor Crittenden?" Because it takes three to make a crowd. Send us the prize.

His Apologists.

From the Fredericktown Plaindealer.

Governor Crittenden's apologists are few and far between, and they find their hands full to answer satisfactorily the pertinent questions that are propounded them.

His Ears.

From the Fredericktown Plaindealer.

Governor Crittenden's ears must tingle mightily these days. His name is in every one's mouth these days, and no very flattering mention thereof is heard either.

His Organs.

From the Marshall Democrat.

The frantic efforts being made by some of the Crittenden organs to unload that gentleman's mountain of blunders upon the coat-tail of the Democracy is meeting with poor success. When the Democratic party plays Sinbad to the "slate's" Old Man of the Sea "butterflies will hatch buzzards in thimbles," as Mr. Finney says, and kangaroos will enact coal oil bills in Jefferson City.

His Reply.

From the Farmington Times.

Gov. Crittenden has written a reply to the demand of the Merchants' Exchange meeting that the present Police Commissioners be removed. It is a very calm and sophistical document, but the great trouble with it is, it is not consistent with his preceding actions in demanding the resignation of two former Police Commissioners, and this fact takes all the meat out of it.

In a Bad Fix.

From the La Grange Democrat.

The Governor seems to have been hoisted by his own petard and bunged by his own boomerang.

His Offenders.

From the La Grange Democrat.

The St. Joseph Gazette, almost alone, defends the Governor in his unholy alliance with the gamblers of St. Louis. The editor of the Gazette was one of the warmest champions of the bill for the repeal of the Johnson gambling law before the Legislature last winter, and whatever may be said of the rudderless steerage of his paper it cannot be said that he is inconsistent with himself.

Very Thin.

From the Central Missourian.

Gov. Crittenden's reply to the address sent him by the Citizens' Committee of St. Louis is evasive and altogether unsatisfactory. He lays great stress on the fact that he is a Democrat, the Governor of a Democratic State, and in his appointments he favored those who were in accord with the Democratic party. This is all well enough, but there are Democrats and Democrats—in other words, he could choose better men and still confine his appointments to the Democratic party. The Governor's reply is a very thin document and does not reflect great credit upon the Chief Executive of the State.

Crittenden's Letter.

From the Steelville Sentinel.

For ourselves, we confess to a feeling of disappointment. The document does not seem to us such a one as the people had a right to expect. It would no doubt show up very well as the special pleading of T. T. Crittenden, Esq., before an ordinary court jury; but as a state paper, emanating from the Chief Executive officer of the great State of Missouri, it is worse than weak. For the police muddle and the wrangling of the petty ward politicians of the city we have nothing but contempt, and care for them only so far as the man whom the Democracy of the State placed in the highest office in their gift may have corruptly or weakly allowed himself to be allied with them.

A Boomerang.

From the La Grange Democrat.

Gov. Crittenden, in his answer to the Exchange resolutions, gave option dealers a merciless dig in the ribs, and his organs, the Warrensburg Journal-Democrat, St. Joseph Gazette and Plattsburg Lever, all hastened to add emphasis to what he had said by characterizing the merchants, tradesmen and dealers who patronized the options as "respectable thugs, thieves, gamblers, pimps, prostitutes, lepers and lice." It since turns out that Gov. Crittenden was himself, at no distant period in the past, an extensive dealer in options, and that he was most ingloriously burnt. Having bucked the tiger to his sorrow it isn't strange that the Governor doesn't cherish any very fond regard for the animal, but his sponsors should be less handy with their epithets, or at least direct them less comprehensively. The blunderbuss shots brought down the Governor the first round.

Suspicions Confirmed.

From the Clarksville Sentinel.

The suspicion of those who refused to vote for him on account of his collusion with the St. Louis gambling ring in order to secure the nomination seems to have been confirmed. And now we have lost all confidence in his integrity both as a politician and as a public officer of the State. His recent official conduct has become a disgrace alike to himself, to his party and to the Commonwealth. His peremptory pardon of the noted gambler Pate of St. Louis, about a year ago, who had been clearly convicted of violating the Johnson gambling law, is very easily explained in the light of recent developments. Hereafter we shall be surprised at nothing he may do.

The Governor's Tenacity.

From the La Grange Democrat.

The tenacity with which he hangs on to the commissioners is very like to that exhibited by the boy who caught the bear. It is altogether probable that he would let go if he could. It looks as if he had so far compromised with the ring that to forsake it or attempt to shake off the coils would be certain destruction, and he seems to prefer to brook the ills he now endures than fly to others whose terrors he can but too wisely guess. Upon the whole, Gov. Crittenden is to be pitied. He unquestionably secured his nomination by promises which he is now fulfilling; indeed every appointment from Insurance Commissioner down was the price of some redeemed pledge. To gratify his ambition he made himself Governor; in the accomplishment of this he made alliances whose weight drag him down to ruin and contempt.

Good Lord, Deliver Us.

From the Rolla Herald.

It is evident from the testimony of good men, that Governor Crittenden is ruled by the St. Louis gamblers and the bummer element of that city, and by his reply to the citizens' committee no doubt is left that he intends to stick by his appointees, notwithstanding they have been shown to be as corrupt a set of men as ever held public positions. May the good Lord deliver us from any more Crittendens.

Ruining the Party.

From the Richmond Democrat.

St. Louis is really a Democratic city, but for some reason, yet unexplained, the Republicans have carried the city regularly at every election since Crittenden was elected Governor. Has the unpopularity of Crittenden anything to do with it? To an outsider it looks very much that way.

A Gambling Governor.

From the Richmond Democrat.

It turns out that Gov. Crittenden has been gambling with the other boys at the Merchants' Exchange in St. Louis, and was, unfortunately for him, on the losing side, and that appears to have made him a little mad; any how he don't think his commission merchant ought to have told him. The commission merchants say that he ought not to have called the Merchants' Exchange a den of gamblers. They are only paying him back in his own coin.

How to Please His Friends.

From the Monroe Appeal.

Gov. Crittenden, it seems, bucked at the tiger on 'Change in St. Louis, until he lost about $1,000, when he declares the Merchants' Exchange to be a gambler's resort. Poor Tom, go out and shoot yourself and please your friends, for that is what they are praying for.

King Crit.

From the Arrow Rock Times.

King Crittenden is out in a lengthy reply to the citizens of St. Louis in regard to the police imbroglio. The citizens' committee are unanimous in the opinion that the Executive's lengthy letter is quite unsatisfactory, if not to say downright insulting. The Governor will find that the storm of popular indignation, like Banquo's ghost, will not down, and that the citizens of St. Louis will not be at all slow in asserting their rights.

Why?

From the Nodaway Democrat.

Why does Gov. Crittenden say in reply to the citizens' committee of St. Louis that he is a Democrat, and the Governor of a Democratic State? What has that to do in extenuation of holding unfit and unworthy appointees in office? Why doesn't the Governor give the Police Commissioners the grand bounce as he did others in 1881, against whom the charges were not so strong as in the present instance.

The Party Can't Afford It.

From the Monroe Appeal.

Some one said to us that the Democratic press of Missouri, and especially the Appeal were, too severe on the Governor, as it would injure the party. That's what's the matter with the country now. Too many partisan papers cover up the rascalities of public officials simply because they belong to the party. Our idea is that a public journal should expose a fraud regardless of the fact that he belongs to the party. The same cry was raised in New York when Samuel J. Tilden laid bare the villainies of the old Tweed ring, but the Democratic party in New York has been stronger since Tweed was punished than it ever was before. Well, now, we look upon Crittenden as the Tweed of Missouri, and are glad that the press of the State are doing their utmost to kick him overboard and have utterly repudiated his administration. Let the ringsters be exposed wherever found, whether Democrats or Republicans, until there is not one left. What this country wants is honest rulers, and not men that stand in with the gambling ring of St. Louis or any other city. The Democratic party cannot afford to be the apologist for such a man, be he Governor or high private in the rear ranks.

A Jonah.

From the Saline County Democrat.

We protest against the St. Joseph Gazette, or any other newspaper, attempting to identify the Democratic party with the present Executive of this State. He has made his bed, let him lie in it; and don't undertake to unload his sins and his blunders upon the party he insulted and misrepresented. You can't pull the wool over the eyes of the honest masses of the party in this State sufficiently to make them believe that the party is responsible for the abuses in St. Louis, or that it is the party which is being attacked. Democrats don't stampede, and they don't scare at the cry of "wolf! wolf!"

Suicidal and Disastrous.

From the Osceola Sun.

The lamentable fact seems to be that the Governor chose for his advisers and counselors the most depraved and corrupt set of men that ever cursed any city, and, following their suggestions, he has placed himself where he is pitied by his friends and despised by his enemies. What the future will be, depends on Gov. Crittenden himself. If he resolutely and independently removes all officials that are even tainted or suspected of being corrupt, and appoints in their places those who will enforce the laws—and all the laws of the State of Missouri—without fear or favor, he will, in some measure, regain the confidence and respect of the people, and have the satisfaction of having, so far as it was in his power, corrected the mistakes of the early history of his administration. Any other course would be suicidal and of the most disastrous character.

A Sound Belief.

From the Sedalia Democrat.

We approve—emphatically and sincerely—the expressed indignation of the citizens of St. Louis over the shameless course pursued by Gov. Crittenden and his satellites. We believe the people of St. Louis are entirely right and that the Governor is irretrievably wrong. We believe that in the name of Democracy crimes have been committed and outrages perpetrated in the city of St. Louis. We believe to be true all the charges preferred against Gov. Crittenden, together with some that have not been preferred. We believe the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH did a brave, conscientious thing when it secured the testimony before the Grand Jury, and that such publication will result in public good.

No Decent Apologist.

From the Palmyra Spectator.

It is not to be wondered at that the Governor finds no decent apologist for his conduct in the city of St. Louis. Elsewhere throughout the State the papers have not been slow to express severe condemnation of his conduct and an entire want of confidence in his integrity. Apart from the humiliating spectacle of a great city turned over to the tender mercies of the gamblers and dead beats who infest it, we are made to witness the degradation of our chief magistrate and the disgrace of an honorable name. The public will not be convinced of the Governor's innocence no matter how the facts may appear in the end. The executive is found in bad company. He cannot or will not cut himself loose from the degrading associations he has formed, and must of necessity share the contempt in which they are held. The Democracy, which elevated him to power, which trusted him and has been betrayed, will see to it that he is placed in such a condition that no further harm may result. Public condemnation is almost unanimous; and it is cheering to see that the very men who assisted most actively in placing him in his present position are the first to pronounce the verdict of weighed in the balance and found wanting.

The Governor's Mistake.

From the Kansas City Times.

The people of the State think too much of liberty to indorse the establishment of a tyranny in in one of its cities. A blow struck at one municipality is felt by all the others and is resented by all. Hence, with an unimportant exception here and there, the State at large is as one with St. Louis in condemnation of the course of the Governor in ignoring the petitions and resisting the will of the people. At the inception of the St. Louis imbroglio the Times assumed that the Governor would respectfully consider the appeals made to him for the removal of his odious appointees; that he would not sacrifice dignity to precipitancy in compliance, but would procure the resignations of the objectionable officials, and restore confidence in his administration by appointing to their places such men as the mass of the people would recommend and indorse. It is amazing that he should have taken any other course. How an intelligent man professing the most elementary principals of Democracy, how a politician of a quarter century's acquaintance with public politics could be induced to ruin his good name and political fortunes in the indulgence of mere obstinacy is past the ordinary comprehension.

The Right to Shoot.

ST. LOUIS, November 4, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I have long been a reader of your fearless and valuable paper, but was very much surprised at the stand it took in the Lynch-Rowell case as expressed in the editorial headed "The Higher Law." This article calls for some comment and I do not think I have ever read a more cowardly or unjust article in my life. Will you please inform me to what law a distracted and disgraced husband and father has access to punish a crime such as Mrs. Rowell committed. Where is the law that will avenge the husband who by that act was more than murdered? Where the law that will protect her children from forever being branded with the disgrace of their mother's sin? Where the law that will punish such dogs as Lynch? A short time ago I notice your paper upheld Chief Sexton for horsewhipping a loafer for merely trying to flirt with a school-girl, and every person commended your paper for the position it took. Then by all that is manly and honest, give a man the unrestrained right to shoot down a dog like Lynch, who degrades his wife, disgraces him and his children and forever robs him of the little happiness he may have in this world. In my opinion only two things are to be regretted. First, that the children must forever bear the stigma of their mother's sin, and the second that while Rowell shot the man who ruined his life he did not also end the career of the wretched woman who had disgraced him. Exchange Membership.

ST. LOUIS, November 3, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

To many members of the Merchants' Exchange it is humiliating to know that memberships are being sold as low as $190 while the initiation fee is $2,500. I must confess, as a member of the Exchange, that I voted against the amendments proposed some time ago. I did so conscientiously, because I felt then that every merchant, no matter how humble, should have access to the floor of the Exchange at a moderate charge. Since the measures proposed were defeated, I am inclined to think I made a mistake in helping to defeat them and I am now experiencing a change of mind. I would suggest that on the death of a member, the heirs of such member receive from the reserve fund $1,000 and $1,500 from a pro rata assessment on the membership. This mode would introduce generally the benevolent feature without being any hardship to the living and would gradually decrease the membership, which is at present fifteen hundred more than is necessary. I use the word "necessary" in the sense that the Exchange has at least fifteen hundred members who never come "on 'Change," and who, if they do come, have no business there. They are lawyers, doctors, ministers, farmers, etc., etc., many of whom live outside the city. I am glad to see several communications in your paper recently on this subject. An intelligent discussion will bring out facts of interest to all and no one can suffer thereby. No doubt the anti-reformers will have something to say when the time comes for action. JOHN S.

Something About the Manufacture of Artificial Limbs.

The Perfection Arrived at in Legs—The Anglesea Leg—Arms, Heads, Noses and Ears.

"Here is a curious pledge that my assistant lent $10 on this morning," said a Fourth street pawnbroker to a POST-DISPATCH reporter as he unrolled an artificial leg from a number of newspapers that encircled it. "As a general rule," he continued, "I refuse articles of this description, because, if unclaimed, they are hard to dispose of. But I know the party that this belongs to. It is his spare limb, and he always redeems it when he wants to have his regular vegetable leg repaired."

Wishing to obtain further information on the subject, the reporter called upon a leading manufacturer of artificial limbs, who said: "In this age of mechanism there are more people wearing artificial limbs than most people suppose. We have about two hundred regular customers, about one-fifth of whom are ladies, who are very liable to lose a limb through disease. Of course they are anxious to and do conceal the defect, and even among men things have changed since the war. Then an artificial limb was something to be proud of, as it was an undeniable proof of bloodshed in the defense of the country, and the valor of the wearer atoned for the deficiency of a limb or two, but now all this has changed, our customers are usually maimed by fooling with the business portion of a reaping machine, or are the remnants of a railroad wreck. As a consequence they are desirous to conceal their infirmities from the well-meant but often disagreeable sympathies of their friends and the general observation of the world. Of course a plain workingman who has outlived his courting days and does not care for the opinions of the world where appearances are realities, may find an honest old-fashioned wooden leg good enough for practical purposes. The war gave the first impetus to the production of artificial limbs, and at present the art seems to have reached perfection. There are a good many jealousies among the different makers in regard to the superiority of this work, and especially in regard to the qualifications necessary to a skilled manufacturer of lignipeds, some claiming that he should be an anatomist, while others maintain that he himself should be a uniped in order to succeed in the business.

"The first noted improvement was known as the ANGLESEA LEG.

It was made for the Marquis of Anglesea, and was in its day considered a wonder of art, and when he was on horseback it was difficult to discover that the limb was artificial. The catgut hid at the back of the heel served to extend the foot when the limb was straightened, and a spring in the instep uplifted the toes from the ground when the leg was flexed in walking.

"To clearly understand the difficulties in constructing a perfect substitute for the natural limb it is necessary that I should say something in regard to the nature of walking, which is somewhat a complex operation. It may be simply stated that man is a wheel with two spokes, his legs, and two fragments of a tire, his feet. He rolls successively on each of these fragments from the heel to the toe. If he had spokes enough he would go round and round, as the boys do when they 'make a wheel' with their four limbs for its spokes. But having only two available for ordinary locomotion, each of those has to be taken up as soon as it has been used, and carried forward to be used again. Two facts, not generally known, are, first, that a man is shorter when he is walking than when at rest; the other fact is, that one side of a man always tends to outwalk the other, so that no person can walk far in a straight line, if he is blindfolded.

"Walking is really a violent motion, as may be experienced when one walks against a door in the dark, slips or trips and comes down, or overlooks the last step in a flight of stairs and discovers how he has been hurling himself forward. From this you will see that no slight difficulties had to be overcome ere the American mechanics turned out limbs that 'beat the world' and seem almost perfection. Here is a limb," said the mechanical artist, "that answers all the purposes of the natural one. We don't keep a stock of them, like boots or shoes. This is only a sample. Every person must be measured carefully so that art must not go too far in furnishing some lanky-legged customer with a better shaped limb than ever nature intended him to wear. Of course, after we have taken correct measurements for the artificial member we have customers who don't consider the limb handsome enough, and want it shaped from a finer model. As a general rule utility is most regarded, and we have customers who can skate well, others are really graceful dancers, and one man distinguished himself by swimming at the Natatorium last summer. The water, though, ruined the leg; it became sort of dropsical, the willow of which it was made swelled up, and he had to come to the shop for repairs."

The reporter asked if the limbs could not be made waterproof.

"Not quite; they are made of the wood of the willow, which is light, strong and healthy, and coated with shellac on the inside, which is hollowed out and provided with openings for ventilation and oiling; the outside is covered with leather, and is finished off with a

COAT OF ENAMEL.

One moment and I will show you how they work."

He called to one of the men working in his shop to come forward and exhibit the ease with which he walked upon his artificial limb. The walking was so near perfect that the reporter was unable to distinguish the real limb from its ligneous substitute. "This is only a common case," said the artist. "You remember Barney Sweeney, that used to be around town. He was a nulliped, and the merchants subscribed and bought him a pair of legs, and he now walks around quite freely. In New York at a public contest, Mr. Frank Stewart walked half a mile in nine minutes with two artificial legs and without a cane, and so natural was his walk that the limbs had to be exhibited to show that there was no imposition. The United States Government has contracts with different manufacturers for supplying crippled soldiers. They are furnished with a new limb every five years, free of charge, the Government paying all costs. We calculate the average life of a limb from five to eight years and the cost is from $50 to $125. We have customers as young as two years old. People become attached to an artificial limb after wearing it some time. Gradually the wooden limb seems to become, as it were, penetrated by the nerves and the intelligence to run downwards until it reaches the last joint of the new member."

The artificial arms exhibited were not near the triumphs of mechanical skill that the lower limbs were, and the manufacturer sadly confessed as much, still they serve many useful purposes.

THE HAND

will grasp anything and hold it moderately tight, and for gracefulness of movement it might do for an opera singer, but when real work has to be done the hand is removed and an iron hook, fork or other utensil substituted. Artificial noses and ears are sometimes made, but the demand is limited, and they are more for ornament than use. On leaving the artificial limb manufacturer, who would almost persuade a man with two good legs to provide himself with a third, the reporter still felt thankful that the limbs he wore he owed to his mother.

SPORTING BUDGET.

Suggestions Regarding the Nines for 1884.

Sullivania—Prospects for a "Box" To-Night—Gossip and Personals.

A correspondent, who is evidently an enthusiast, and has some very good ideas on base-ball matters, indites the following:

ST. LOUIS, November 4, 1883.

Sporting Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In an issue of your paper of a few evenings ago Mr. Von der Ahe says he will not spare money to secure a good nine for '84. Putting faith in the statement, will Mr. Von der Ahe engage Radbourne of the Providence Club for pitcher? True he wants $4,000, but he is the finest pitcher in the country and an A No. 1 batter. Batting, however, has always been the pet weakness of all the nines that ever represented St. Louis. The engagement of Mansell and Lewis in the middle of the season proved their value, and the great necessity of securing good batting talent for next season's nine. Has Taylor of the Alleghenys been signed by the St. Louis Club? This would be a move in the right direction, as was that of securing Manager Williams. J. A. D.

Now there is reason in all things, and neither Mr. Radbourne nor any other pitcher is worth as much more than other players. Ward of the New Yorks has received $3,000 for his last year's work, and Brick Ewing $3,200, and they are regarded with very jealous eyes by the other men, who account for a great deal of their ill success and lack of heart by this unequal compensation. The St. Louis salary list has by no means been controlled by the reserve rule, and Mr. Von der Ahe offered a reserve man $1,900 to sign a contract for next season, which he has steadily refused; but it is very doubtful whether he can do nearly as well elsewhere. Radbourne might as well demand $6,000 or $7,000 with the same prospect of getting it. He is a valuable man, but is not worth the rate of $8,000 a year. In the meantime the prospect of a dissolution of the strong League club in Cleveland grows stronger ever day, and as Manager Williams is naturally better posted on the attending circumstances than any of the Association officials and can take quicker advantage accordingly, no doubt Mr. Von der Ahe will answer the popular demand by giving him every possible aid and facility for giving St. Louis a big nine for '84.

SULLIVANIA.

Manager Al. Smith yesterday had a telegram from the Omaha Athletic Club, asking him to exhibit on the grounds there. He is ocvr-run with applications for dates.

On Saturday evening at the East St. Louis exhibition John L. Sullivan knocked out Jas. Miles, better known at Kelly's as "the gypsy." He is anxious now to spar with McCoy at the People's.

Sullivan's declination to go in the prizering is based upon his fear of homicide, and there is something in it. His glove blows have the effect of a sand-club, which stuns but does not fracture skulls or break necks.

In regard to the exhibition at the People's, Manager Robertson says it will go on tonight, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. He is willing to give the matter a full legal test and holds that a sparring exhibition as part of a dramatic performance does not come under the statute.

Sullivan pitched yesterday at the Sportsman's Park for a picked nine against the St. Louis team, assisted by several well-known professionals. About 4,000 persons were present, and the result was 15 to 3 against the Sullivan team. The crowd was not a regulation base ball attendance, but was evidently brought together through curiosity to see the great shoulder hitter. Everything passed off quiet and orderly, and Sullivan showed his paces in a satisfactory manner. He was dressed in a white shirt with "St. Louis" across the breast, white pants and brown stockings. He gave evidence of having once been a tosser, and pitched a tolerably swift ball. He also played at short stop.

SPORTING SUNDRIES.

Mr. T. P. Sullivan played shortstop and pitcher for the picked nine yesterday. He is getting in shape for his New Orleans trip.

Horace B. Phillips is still in town and will probably remain here a few days watching events in connection with the new Lucas-Wainwright.

The athletic competitions at Compton Avenue Park yesterday resulted in Nally winning the 120 yard hurdle race; W. H. Roberson the one mile handicap; G. Stratton and W. R. Nalley, the three-legged race; and J. Mulvey, the weight putting competition.

"Mr. H. V. Lucas, the St. Louis capitalist, who is the head and front of the new Mound City Club, says that no player who has been reserved by any club will be signed by him." —Enquirer. Incorrect. Mr. Lucas says he will observe all contracts, but no reserve rule. In fact he is pulling very vigorously for several reserved men.

"Charlie Mason was riding up in an Eighth street car the other evening," says Hincken of the Philadelphia Dispatch, "when suddenly a jolt extinguished all the lamps. The car would have been in total darkness had it not been for Charlie. His diamond stud shed such a glare that every person thought that the conductor had turned on the electric light."

"Its Descent."

ST. LOUIS, November 3, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Please describe the descent of the St. Louis Base-Ball Club. And the players St. Louis has got for 1884, and oblige yours,

A CONSTANT READER.

[ANSWER—The ancestral tree of the St. Louis Club traces its lineage back to 1875, when Messrs. Lucas, Turner, Fowle, Bishop and others were deeply interested in bringing it into the world. It was "busted" in 1877 by the Louisville crookedness of Hall and Devlin, players engaged for the following season. About three years ago it was organized on a sort of co-operative plan with Mr. Von der Ahe as chief financial backer, and in 1881 it became one of the organizers of the new American Association.

New Contracts.

Secretary Williams has approved the following contracts:

Thomas McLaughlin, Edward Whiting, George W. Latham, Guy J. Hecker, Daniel Sullivan, William Wolf and Levi Browning, with the Eclipse of Louisville.

Notice has also been received of the following contracts:

Thomas F. Lee, Geo. W. Crosby, Geo. F. Gore, M. J. Kelley, E. N. Williamson, F. S. Flint, A. Dalrymple, Thomas Burns, Fred Pfeffer, William Sunday, G. Whitely, M. Depangher, F. E. Goldsmith, Walter H. Kenzie and Douglass Young, with the Chicagos.

New York has released J. E. O'Neil from the reserve list.

Bound to Survive.

Regarding the interesting question of a team in Louisville next year, an Enquirer correspondent says: "The City of the Falls will certainly be up and abreast with the procession next year. It is a mistake that Hecker and Browning have signed contracts with the Atletics; it is a mistake that Joe Gerhardt has agreed to play with the New York League team; it is a mistake that Sullivan is to go to Baltimore, and it is a mistake that the Eclipse Base-ball Association is hopelessly in debt. All of the players of 1883 have been reserved except Lew Brown, and, while only two or three of them have signed, they have all agreed to do so under conditions which the management will undoubtedly accept."

ALTHOUGH MANY ARE PREDISPOSED TO LUNG TROUBLE FROM BIRTH, yet even such may escape Consumption, or other Pulmonary or Bronchial disease, if due care and watchfulness be observed, and all exciting causes are promptly treated as they arise. It is in these cases Dr. Jayne's Expectorant exercises its most beneficial effects, and has produced the largest proportion of its cures. Besides promptly removing Coughs and Colds, which, when left to themselves, are the immediate causes of tuberculous development, this standard remedy allays any inflammation which may exist, and by promoting easy expectoration, cleanses the lungs of the substances which clog them up, and which rapidly destroy when suffered to remain.

EDUCATIONAL.

The State Superintendent's View of Corporal Punishment.

Mr. C. H. Murphy, an old teacher in St. Louis County, Missouri, is now County Superintendent of the Public Schools of Tulare County, Cal.

D. M. Bremer, a recent principal of the Brazeau high school, has been elected director of the College of Dramatic Art, New Orleans.

The Northwest Missouri Teachers' Association will meet at Liberty, Mo., during the Christmas holidays.

A State association for colored teachers is to be organized at Jefferson City during the holidays.

Principal Collins is to take the place of Prof. E. R. Booth in the Kirkwood School. Prof. Booth has connected himself with the St. Louis training schools.

Commissioner H. A. Gass called a meeting of the teachers of Audrain County on Saturday for the purpose of organizing the county into township institutes. The Commissioner has adopted a system of regular monthly examination of teachers, to be held on the first Saturday of each month. The permanent township fund of Audrain is $36,919 75, and the county fund is $12,598 58, making in all $49,518 33.

Superintendent W. E. Coleman in answering the question, "Has the teacher the right to inflict corporal punishment upon an unruly pupil?" says: "In all the decisions of our courts, corporal punishment, when administered properly, has been recognized as one of the teachers legitimate rights. An action brought against a teacher on the simple charge of corporal punishment would not be sustained in any of our courts; but when the punishment is carried to excess, the charge of improper treatment, brutality or assault may be made to stand against the teacher and he fined or punished therefor."

An advance sheet of the thirty-second annual report of the State School Superintendent presents a line of statistics relating to the school work of Missouri, which, according to Dr. Shannon and Prof. Carrington of Jefferson City, shows that Missouri has a larger productive school fund than any other State. Prof. Carrington says: "In April, 1882, the township, county and State funds combined were $9,476,696 58. Since that time they have been increased—notably the county funds—so that now we may safely estimate them at more than ten millions. Our permanent funds are increasing at the rate of a half a million yearly."

A Bold Robbery.

Tony Neiderweisser, the proprietor of the old Schnaider Garden, was the victim of a singularly bold sneak thief several evenings ago, the method adopted being the same as employed at the Republican office last week, when Mr. Gallagher was robbed of a small amount of silver, the proceeds from the sale of newspapers. Neiderweisser was closing up the garden saloon, and had put the day's receipts, amounting to about $75, in a canvas sack, when a well-dressed young man entered briskly and said: "Give me a glass of beer right quick, I want to catch the car." Tony hastened to oblige the young man and turned to draw the beer, when the young man seized the sack of money and dashed out into the night.

Arrest of a Forger.

BOSTON, November 5.—A young man giving his name as Elmer R. Johnson, is under arrest, charged with passing a forged check of $130 on the National Park Bank of New York, and signed "John S. H. Meyers." A package of blank checks of the First National Bank of New York were found with him. He said that his real name was Frank Meyer and that the alleged signer of the check was his brother.

CAUGHT IN CHICAGO.

An Eloping Wife who was Followed Across Three Continents.

CHICAGO, November 5.—A sensation is caused by the arrest of Christian Heische, formerly the Accountant-General of Paraguay and confidential adviser of the King of that country. The complainant is Theodore Borowski, a wealthy merchant at Assumption. Ten months ago, at a state dinner, Heische met Mme. Borowski, wife of the complainant and daughter of a distinguished family. After this the visits of the servant of the King to the home of the merchant Prince, Borowski, were frequent, and rumors of misconduct had begun to be whispered, when, one morning, seven months ago, Heische, together with Mme. Borowski and her 4-year-old daughter,

EMBARKED FOR LONDON

and thence to the Continent, where they paid a long visit to the parents of the unfaithful wife. During this time Borowski was beside himself with rage. Three months ago the runaway pair came to New York and thence to this city, where they furnished apartments on Webster avenue. All went well until Borowski, who had discovered the whereabouts of the fugitives, reached here and had Heische placed under arrest. Mme. Borowski was found secreted in the parlor of her home, but as she agreed to return to her forgiving husband she was spared the disgrace of arrest. It is claimed by Borowski that Heische, at the time he bade Montevideo farewell, took with him $30,000 belonging to and that the fugitive left a wife and three children at the Paraguayan capital. Meanwhile the husband, who had expended many a thousand dollars in tracking his wife, and had traveled across three continents, is happy in her presence after a forced absence of seven months.

THE WRONGED HUSBAND,

A STRANGE MANIA.

The Queer Actions of a Young Philadelphian—Feigning Attempts at Suicide.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, November 5.—Yesterday afternoon John Berwick, aged 22 years, who for the past two years has shown symptoms of mental aberration, and who has a mania for feigning attempts at suicide, was in a saloon and became quarrelsome with some companions, and his father was sent for. On the latter's arrival, John remarked that he had a great deal of trouble, and, stepping into the street, swallowed the contents of vial. A moment later he fell down and began writhing and going into convulsions. He was quickly taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he said he had swallowed paris green. The stomach-pump was applied, but could be discovered. There was, however, a strong odor of alcohol about the young man. The father said that his son had been drinking heavily, but that he had not taken poison. Sometimes he would draw a bottle from his pocket at the table, bid family good-by and drink the contents. Eighteen months ago he claimed to have been bitten by a dog, and at the end of nine days he simulated symtoms of hydrophobia. He was apparently unconscious that night, although his pulse was almost normal. A diagnosis of his case will be made.

NO TRACE OF POISON

THE BLOOD OF THE HOWARDS.

The Little Blind Heir to All Their Titles and Estates.

From the Cork Examiner.

The little Earl of Arundel is to be carried now to the shrine of Caravaggio, where prayers for the recovery of his sight are to be offered. We know of nothing at once more pitiful and more interesting than the case of this four-year-old heir of all the titles, estates and fame of the great Howard family. Its chief title is from that rough diamond, Roger Bigod, Earl of Norfolk, who, when choleric Edward I., urging him to a distasteful adventure, cried, "Sir Earl, you shall either go or hang!" stoutly retorted: "Sir King, I will neither go nor hang!" and forthwith raised him an army of revolt so imposing that the King sought a reconciliation. In reality, the Bigods had lost the title and were all nigh forgotten when the Dukedom of Norfolk and its hereditary Earl Marshalship passed over to the Mowbrays, and thence became centered in the person of a young woman, together with the estates and titles of the Fitz-Alans, Earls of Arundel, early in the fifteenth century. This girl, the heiress and sole representative of two great lines, was wedded to a smart young knight of Yorkshire, Sir Robert Howard, the head of a family of lawyers who had more wealth than blood. It was the son of this marriage, John Howard, who rode in high favor with the York kings, was made a councilor by Edward IV., was given both dukedom and marshalship by Richard III., who found those lines which Shakspeare immortalizes pinned on his tent door on the morn of Bosworth's fight:

> Jocky of Norfolk, be not so bold,
> For Dickson, thy master, is bought and sold, and who died on the field with his betrayed King that same day. Eighteenth in succession from that "Jocky" is the present Duke of Norfolk, Henry Fitzalan Howard, the Premier Duke and hereditary Earl-Marshal of England, and the foremost Catholic nobleman of Great Britain. Even in his religion he is historic, for another of his ancestors lost his head in Elizabeth's time for his devotion to Rome, and incidentally, to that most bewitching of Rome's daughters, Mary of Scots. The Howards have kept the faith ever since, through good and evil report. The present duke wedded Lady Flora Hastings, daughter of the famous Countess of Loudoun, and of another ancient English family which draws its very name from the battle-field which gave Britain to the Normans. Their single son, Philip Mary Joseph, Earn of Arundel and Surrey, was born blind. There had been something infinitely touching in the devoutness of the efforts made by the stricken parents to avert this affliction. The poor little boy has been blessed in person by the Pope; he has been prayed for at Knock, at Lourdes and the other shrines in Europe, and special invocations on his behalf have been enjoined more than once from the Vatican upon the churches of Europe.

From the Columbus Sun.

Oran Cobb, a little orphan girl only thirteen years of age, lives with Mrs. Jane Phelps, a widow, on the other side of the river, just north of the Columbus and Western Railroad track, and works for a livelihood in Eagle and Phœnix Mill, No. 2. Yesterday was pay day, and she drew $4 20 as her earnings for two weeks. While en route home, and just as she was crossing the railroad track, she was attacked by two men who told her if she screamed they would kill her. They robbed her of the $4 20 and then took her to the river, tied a handkerchief over her eyes and threw her in just below the railroad bridge and left her, no doubt thinking that she would be drowned. The water was very shallow, however, and the frightened child managed to reach the bank again in safety.

"KNOCKED OUT."

The Statute on Sparring Exhibitions Not Apt to be Enforced,

And Sullivan and His Aggregation Will Regale St. Louis.

Arrangements having been entered into by the management of the People's Theater and Manager Al. Smith, of the Sullivan Combination to give a performance in which glove-sparring would be the main feature, the following communication was forwarded to Manager Robertson, of the People's Theater, by Chief Taaffe:

OFFICE OF CHIEF OF POLICE,
ST. LOUIS, November 3, 1883.

Joseph A. Robertson, Esq., Proprietor People's Theater:

DEAR SIR—It having been reported that a contemplated sparring or boxing exhibition is to take place at your theater, under the management of the John L. Sullivan Combination, I beg leave to call your respectful attention to section 1508 of the revised Missouri Statutes, as follows:

"Sec. 1508.—Sparring and boxing. Any person who shall engage in any public sparring or boxing exhibition, or who shall aid, abet or assist in any such exhibition, or who shall furnish any room or other place for such exhibition, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor."—(Laws 1874, p. 49, § 3, amended.)

Very respectfully,
B. P. TAAFFE, Chief of Police.
W. H. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

At the same time an order was issued to Capt. Fruchte, in whose district all the theaters are located, the same being as follows:

ST. LOUIS, November 3, 1883.

CAPT. THOMAS L. FRUCHTE, Commanding Central Police District:

SIR—From reports now in circulation that the John L. Sullivan Combination contemplate giving a sparring and boxing exhibition at the People's Theater on to-morrow evening, 4th inst., your attention is called to the revised Missouri Statutes, Section 1508, with instructions to see that the law is enforced at the theater in question, or any other theater or public place during the stay of said combination.

Very respectfully,
B. P. TAAFFE, Chief of Police.

AL SMITH,

the manager of the Sullivan show, said: "If there is to be any interference I will not have my men spar, but it is rather tough to bring them all this distance and not give the people a chance to see the champion. I would not have them on the stage and have them stopped for $5,000, as we have engagements ahead which would suffer by it. Now I want to say that I cannot understand how Mitchell, an English pugilist, and his trainer, are allowed the privilege of sparring here and the law is applied to us. It is the first place we have had any trouble, and on Sunday week we gave a matinee and evening performance. The houses were crowded and everything went off nicely. However, the chances are good for our showing, and Manager Robertson is hard at work getting the legal bearings of the case.

Mr. Robertson replied to Chief Taaffe to the following effect:

ST. LOUIS, November 4, 1883.

Col. B. B. Taaffe, Chief of Police, City:

MY DEAR SIR—I am duly in receipt of your very kind letter of yesterday—and in reply beg to say that I in no sense of the word intend to violate the law. The entertainment I propose to give is one that will be incident to the play, and which has been performed in nearly all the principal theaters in the country, and before distinguished and refined audiences. I feel confident the press will not oppose, but rather approve of the entertainment. At all events the entertainment is not a violation of the statute referred to in your letter of yesterday. I wish that both you and Capt. Fruchte would attend and satisfy yourselves.

Respectfully, etc.,
J. A. ROBERTSON.

Mr. Robertson further stated to a POST-DISPATCH reporter: "I will bring the boxers on in in 'Karl,' and will hold myself responsible for any infraction against the statute, which was made for the purpose of stopping Saturday night exhibitions for silver cups, which very often opened with the gloves and wound up with fists. We know all that, and why it should be stopped. On the other hand, I have seen City Counselor Bell, and he says that there can be no interference with the sparring, and that in any case information can only be lodged against me, and a warrant issued on that presumption. I have also seen Judge Noonan and Prosecuting Attorney Claiborne, and they say no warrants will be issued to prevent the sparring to-night, so that in any case it will go on."

THE PICNIC SCENE

Capt. Fruchte stated that his action would be under orders from the Chief, governed by the advice of the City Solicitor, so that the outlook at present is that Sullivan will meet the Maori and Steve Taylor at the People's to-night as arranged.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL TREASURES.

Relics of an Extinct Race Found Near Santa Barbara.

From the Santa Babara Independent.

About two or three months ago C. W. Clark of this city decided upon collecting a small cabinet of curiosities, to include coins, relics and trinkets. The result has been the accumulation of a store of rare curiosities which would make an ordinary natural history society turn green with envy. The last important addition is a collection of stone utensils manufactured by a race of people now extinct upon this coast who were evidently far advanced in the science of stone-cutting, and also in the arts culinary and ornamental. The Digger Indians were not the first inhabitants of this region. There was a race of people living here in Santa Barbara more industrious and better informed as to how life and comfort might be prolonged and promoted than the poor, groveling subservient race of "root-diggers" found here when the Dominican padres came here to plant and cultivate civilization. Most of the houses of the old residents of Santa Barbara's sea-coast contain queer and well-finished articles of stoneware dug up or found upon the surface of the earth, all relics of a people now extinct.

These articles are nearly all of stone. Some, however, are of bone and fibrous formation, and none of metal or wood. The archæ logists have for years been digging up and investigating the formation of the mounds in Iowa, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri. They have dug up and sent East shiploads of arrow-heads of flint and spear-heads, war clubs and trinkets of a crude and rough shape. Pieces of pottery have been collected in Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona, all showing that civilization once existed upon this continent prior to the arrival of the now fast disappearing Indian race. We had a very industrious and intelligent race of people living upon this coast in the long, long ago. Who were they? Vancouver, the famous navigator, says in his description of this coast more than a century ago that there were no less than thirteen populous villages of natives upon the sea coast now known as Ventura and Santa Barbara. Where are those thirteen populous villages? Where are the native descendants? All that can be found concerning them are the fragments picked up in the valleys or the relics dug from the graves. The Indian graves in this section and the adjacent islands are prolific in specimens of the handiwork of an extinct population. These specimens that are exhumed, and of which the Smithsonian Institute at Washington contains many tons, are indications of industry practiced here two or three centuries ago, which puts all of our fine stonecutting and sculptury in the shade. These extinct tribes made piping or tubes out of the hard agate rock, beads out of shells, charms and talismans of exquisite shape and perfection, representing fishes and animals, out of abalone shells; fine fish hooks from mussel shells, and all kinds of cooking utensils from the solid rock. They had no metallic chisels or drills, no metals of any kind, no turning lathes, and yet their work is perfect.

The collection donated yesterday to Clark's Natural Müsenm includes one mammoth-sized mortar and pestle, both cut out of solid hard rock, the mortar nearly two feet across the top, the pestle two feet in length. Both are perfect in contour and finished as smoothly as a rock can be dressed. The mortar would hold about half a bushel of grain and was no doubt the property of the miller of the tribe, who could grind corn meal very rapidly by the aid of such a large sized hand mill. Then there are a dozen or more beautifully finished mortars and pestles all of solid stone, some of one variety of stone and some of another. Some of the mortars are smoothly polished agate and very beautiful. The most remarkable of these exhumed Indian curiosities are the ollas or water vessels and the solid stone cooking vessels. These latter articles are wonderful. The largest is a globular vessel of solid stone and as round as a ball. It is hollow and has been patiently chipped out until the globe is quite hollow, about two inches thick, with an aperture about four inches in diameter at the top. It still bears the marks of fire, although it has been buried, perhaps, two centuries. There are several of these globular stone cooking vessels in Clark's collection and dozens of other aboriginal curiosities.

Dentistry seems to have been quite an art in the days when the extinct race held control here. Among the store of curiosities exhumed from the graves upon the Santa Barbara Islands and now in Clark's collection are six or seven sets of false teeth. They are formed each from a shell which was fashioned to fit the roof of the mouth or could be adjusted outside of the gums. These shell teeth are perfectly formed and easily adjustable. Whether they were used for ornament or for the mastication of food is one of those mysteries the grave still holds in concealment. The water bottles are round and are of woven grass mixed with asphaltum. The pipes are tubes of agate or fine colored stones gathered upon the beach. How the natives turned and polished this hard flint-like stone and then drilled holes through it so as to use it for a pipe is a mystery. Among these recently recently exhumed curiosities from the Santa Barbara Islands are dozens of highly polished stone rings; some of them have been broken up, but have been mended with a cement of which asphaltum is the principal ingredient. This cement used by these extinct tribes appears to have been durable and effective, as the shattered stone rings united by it are as strong and as solid as those not damaged.

The islanders appear to have made good use of seals' teeth and whalebone. The latter, when found in a petrified state, was used as our Chinese abalone gatherers use an iron bar—to pry up the mollusks from the rocks. Clark has one of these petrified bone crowbars, one side of which was used as a creator of fire. Its rough side resembles a file, and the rapid friction between it and a piece of dry wood creates fire.

THE BOY AVENGER.

A Convicted Murderer Killed by his Victim's Son.

From the New Orleans Times Democrat.

John Coffey, jr., took the law in his own hands yesterday and avenged his father's murder by slaying Alfred Gossett. The deed was committed at the corner of Rampart and Conti streets, and for coolness and deliberation rivals any killing ever recorded on crime's calendar.

Gossett, handcuffed to James Wedlock, left the Parish Prison in charge of Deputy Sheriffs John Dominick and Louis Toucher bound for the Criminal District Court, where both of the prisoners were to receive sentence, Gossett for murdering Officer John Coffey, and Wedlock for being accessory to a robbery committed by the notorious negress, Eliza Riddle. Through the Congo Square the officers marched the convicts; Dominick directly behind Gossett and Toucher behind Wedlock. It is a custom with the deputies, when conveying desperate criminals to and from court, to take a different route each time, and yesterday they concluded to walk the prisoners up Rampart street.

On the down-town, riverside corner of Rampart and Conti streets is a small, low building, used by M. Garriga as a bar-room and oyster saloon, and it was there that young Coffey awaited the arrival of his victim. On came the prisoners and the deputies. Wedlock and Gossett had just passed the corner of the house which concealed the avenger, when suddenly and with lightning-like rapidity, Coffey sprang from his hiding-place, pistol in hand. The weapon was pointed directly at Gossett's head, the muzzle hardly a foot away, and when the weapon was discharged Gossett fell forward, wounded unto death, dragging Wedlock down to his knees.

Dominick, who was directly behind Gossett, grabbed Coffey's right arm while it was still elevated and Toucher wrenched the smoking revolver from his hand.

Young Coffey was arraigned before Recorder Ford on the charge of murder. He stepped from the dock with a firm tread and with head held high, as if proud of the manner in which he had taken off his father's murderer. He is a slim-built youth, about 20 years of age, with large grey eyes and expressive face. On his upper lip appears a slight growth of dark hair, which can hardly be called a mustache. He was cool and collected, and as he appeared before the bar in that crowded court-room, attired in his working clothes, a blue jumper and dark pants, no one not acquainted with the facts would for a moment have supposed that he could have committed the crime charged against him. He pleaded not guilty to the charge as read by the recorder, and was remanded to the Parish Prison without bail for trial. To his friends he spoke freely, and is reported to have said that he killed Gossett because he considered it his duty. Gossett had murdered his father in cold blood, had rendered his once happy home desolate and left five orphans to mourn the loss of a kind and gentle parent. He went to the Parish Prison apparently well satisfied, and was lodged in one of the upper cells. His mother and sister visited him soon after he reached the institution and saw him in the reception room. They did not display much emotion, and when they withdrew the young man went back to his cell. He seemed to feel confident that his course would be approved.

Gew-Gaws in Favor.

From the New York Evening Post.

Small fruits, including rosy apples, pears, apricots, plums, grapes and peaches of natural size, are seen upon the newly arrived brocaded velvets and satins from Lyons. A deep orange-colored satin shot with silver, is now exhibited by a Broadway firm. This odd groundwork is brocaded with large crimson velvet egg-plums in clusters. Another pattern has a ground of silver-colored Ottoman silk of unusually heavy cord, brocaded with deep red coxcomb flowers of natural size, and a heavy white Ottoman silk is covered with white thistle-blooms, the feathery portion being made by full tufts of raised chenille.

Silver clover leaves covered with tiny diamond clippings, made to resemble drops of dew, are among the new designs in fancy jewelry, the set consisting of lace-pin, earrings, hair ornament, slide and bangle bracelets.

Belts and chatelaine bags made of finely-embossed leather, of entirely new designs, are again in high vogue.

Cherry red and ochre yellow are the leading colors in millinery just now.

OLD MRS. GRIMES.

(Tune—"Old Grimes is Dead.")

Old Mrs. Grimes is dead. Alas!
We ne'er shall see her more;
She was the wife of good old Grimes,
Who died some years before.

A very worthy dame is gone,
Since she gave up her breath;
Her head was white with frosts of time,
She lived until her death.

Though rough the path her willing feet
E'er walked where duty led;
And never wore a pair of shoes,
Except when out of bed.

Busy she was, from morn to night,
Spite of old Time's advances;
Although her husband left her here
In easy circumstances.

Good Mrs. Grimes is now at rest.
She'll rest through endless ages;
The sun has set, her work is done,
She's gone to claim her wages.

DOVER BEACH.

The sea is calm to-night,
The tide is full, the moon lies fair
Upon the straits—on the French coast the light
Gleams and is gone: the cliffs of England stand,
Glimmering and vast, out in the tranquil bay.

Come to the window, sweet is the night air!
Only, from the long line of spray
Where the sea meets the moon-blanched sand,
Listen! you hear the grating roar
Of pebbles, which the waves draw back, and fling
At their return, up the high strand,
Begin, and cease, and then again begin,
With tremulous cadence slow, and bring
The eternal note of sadness in.

Sophocles long ago
Heard it on the Ægean, and it brought
Into his mind the turbid ebb and flow
Of human misery; we
Find also in the sound a thought,
Hearing it by this distant northern sea.

The sea of faith
Was once, too, at the full, and round earth's shore
Lay like the folds of a bright girdle furl'd.
But now I only hear
Its melancholy, long, withdrawing roar,
Retreating to the breath
Of the night wind, down the vast edges drear
And naked shingles of the world.

Ah love, let us be true
To one another! for the world, which seems
To lie before us like a land of dreams,
So various, so beautiful, so new,
Hath really neither Joy, nor love, nor light,
Nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain;
And we are here as on a darkling plain,
Swept with confused alarms of struggles and flight,
Where ignorant armies clash by night.

MATTHEW ARNOLD.

BULGARIA'S RULER.

A Young Prussian Officer Who was Made a King by Russia.

From the London World.

Prince Alexander Joseph of Battenberg is the third child of Prince Alexander Louis George Frederic Emile of Hesse (uncle of the Grand Duke of Hesse) by his marriage with Julie, Princesse de Battenberg, daughter of the deceased Count Maurice de Haucke of Poland. The marriage was a morgantic one, and this fact was urged against the present Prince of Bulgaria by his opponents in the Bulgarian Constituent Assembly at Tirnova in the spring of 1879. Prince Alexander was born April 5, 1857, and was elected Prince of Bulgaria April 29, 1879. His chief qualification for the princely office was physical. He stands over six feet high, straight as an arrow, and possesses a fine, commanding figure. Whether on foot or in the saddle he looks every inch a soldier. His face is dark, so are his hair and eyes; his features are regular, and he cultivates alternately a mustache a la militaire, or a full beard, as his fancy dictates.

The Prince accompanied the Russian headquarters from the opening of the campaign to the fall of Plevna; he then left the field for some weeks, but recrossed the Danube in January, 1878, and rejoined the Grand Duke Nicholas at Adrianople about the 1st of February. He was a favorite at headquarters, where his good nature and readiness to oblige made many friends. A little incident will illustrate this trait in his character. At Adrianople a correspondent of the Times, having heard that a review was to be held, rode to the Turkish konak, then serving as the Grand Duke's quarters, to inquire as to the time and place. Riding into the court-yard he saw an officer about to enter the office of Gen. Nepokirchitzky, the chief of the general staff, and inquired as to the rumored review. The reply was: "I have heard nothing about it, but I am just going to see the General and will ask him; if you will wait a moment I will return and tell you." The correspondent sat on his horse, and in four or five minutes the officer returned and explained that it was "only a review of the Grand Duke's own grenadier regiment, which was ordered to the front at Chataldja." The correspondent then recognized his courteous informant as Prince Battenberg. The close resemblance between his German uniform and that of the Russian staff had prevented his noting the fact that he was accosting a Russian lieutenant of cavalry.

Prince Alexander made the very grave mistake in forming his household as the ruler of Bulgaria, of surrounding himself with men of his own age, and as deficient as himself in experience of government and in administrative knowledge. He took with him from Germany two young barons who made good companions for a frolic, but who are worse than useless as advisers in matters of State. Elderly Bulgarians complain loudly of the want of dignity and decorum at the palace in Sofia. A Cabinet Minister going to see the Prince on an important errand which would not bear postponement to official hours, on arriving in the room next to the dining hall, heard the sort of uproar which is made by a party of school boys when the master has been called away from the table. He sent in his card, and a dead silence ensued; after a moment's delay he was ushered into the breakfast room, and found every one looking very grave, but with that demure counterfeit gravity affected by the aforesaid schoolboys after the master's unexpected return. On official occasions, however, the Prince of Bulgaria maintains a dignity and courtesy appropriate to his position. His chief mistakes as a ruler of Bulgaria have been due, not to his inherent defects, but to the very difficult position he has to occupy, viz., ostensible sovereign of the principality, while, in reality, only a Russian executive official.

The Prince of Bulgaria rises at 7½ a. m., and has the matutinal cafe of the Continent an hour later. The hour of breakfast or dejeuner is 12½, and the dinner is served at 7½. The adjutants de jour habitually breakfast and dine with his Highness, and besides these regular guests he is fond of inviting little breakfast and dinner parties to the congenial spirits of his entourage. The regular working hours of the Prince are from 9½ a. m. to 9½ p. m. He is ready to receive his ministers every day in case they have business requiring his personal attention, and he presides over all ministerial councils when there are affairs of importance to be discussed. He is fond of horseback exercise, and it is very rare that a fine day does not tempt him to ride or drive in the suburbs of his capital. He is not particularly addicted to literary pursuits, and his reading is chiefly confined to works on military subjects. The chief amusements at the palace in Sofia are whist and the Russian game of "Wint," the latter being unknown to Western European card players and amusement seekers. During the residence of the Bulgaria court at the old konak (palace) the Prince gave large parties and soirees dansantes, but during the rebuilding of the palace the temporary quarters he inhabits are unsuitable for such entertainments and he is forced to confine himself to the little breakfast and dinner parties above alluded to. This new palace, it may be mentioned, is a source of high displeasure to the economically disposed Bulgarian masses. It was to cost only a small sum, as originally intended, but it is said to have already cost 2,000,000 francs and is not yet finished. As the average Bulgarian mansion costs about £8 10s 6d, it may be appreciated that the natives are not happy whenever the new palace expenses become a subject of discussion, or, worse still, of payment.

What Killed the Sons of Malta.

From the Lafayette (Ind.) Courier.

In connection with the death of Gen. Steedman, who instituted the order of the Sons of Malta in Lafayette, the Courier recalls an incident which terminated the career of that order in the country. George Harding, an employe of the wholesale grocery establishment of Reynolds, Earl & Hatcher, a brave and brawny Scotchman, desired to become a member of the order, and the order was only too glad to "take him in." A night was set apart for his initiation, and as he was a particularly powerful man the gathering of the clans was unusually large. The initiation proceeded amid uproarious fun up the elevated railway and a plunge into the seething waters of the lake. A wet blanket was in the hands of a dozen strong men, in which the aspirant was tossed about until they became exhausted. Harding was an intensely earnest man, and took the initation to be a serious affair. Being told by the grand conductor that from the elevated railway he should be plunged into a lake, he had contracted his muscles and nerved himself for the battle with the waves. When he struck the blanket the shock was too great for his nerves. He was taken to his home a paralytic. He lived a year, suffering intensely, and died in great agony. The order paid out over $2,000 in his behalf. All that medical skill could do was done, but to no purpose. He was a nobleman, and bore his sufferings like a hero or a martyr. He never once complained or spoke harshly of those who caused it all. His sufferings and death were the death knell to the Sons of Malta, not only in Lafayette, but throughout America.

A HAPPY CHURCH.

How the Congregation Got Rid of their Minister.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

Night before last an Eagle reporter, passing a church in the outskirts of the town, was astounded to hear the sounds of revelry within. It was something more than the ordinary love feast, and the reporter stepped to the door to make inquiries, arriving just in time to see one of the deacons go to the ceiling with a hallelujah yell, and the rest of the congregation following suit as fast as they could find room on the floor to give the spring.

"What is it all about?" inquired the mystified reporter of a lame sister who couldn't jump more than four feet, and therefore was comparatively within reach of his question.

"Bless the Lamb! Glory! Gimme room! Hallelujah!" and up and down she went in a vain endeavor to reach the height attained by those who didn't limp.

"Give it up!" exclaimed the reporter, necking a deacon as he dropped on his collar bone, and before he could right himself for another leap. "What's going on here? what's the cause of all this rejoicing?"

"We fetched him!" panted the deacon. "He defied us a long time, but we downed him at last. Glory! Hallelujah! Jump, brethren! Keep it up, sister! The Lord has been with us in abundant grace, and has in His bounty enabled us to bounce the pastor! Go it! Whoop!"

"Have you been getting rid of the minister?" demanded the reporter.

"Well, I should cluck!" responded the deacon, going for the roof once more and coming down on his uppers. "We had been at him for some time, but he wouldn't resign, and we thought we were in for it. But we fetched him at last. Whoop!"

"Tell me how you did it," pleaded the reporter, as the deacon came down again.

"First, we accused him of robbing the contribution box, and he raised us out by showing the box never had anything in it. We knew he would do that, and we set it up on him so that he would get confidence in himself. Then we paid him his salary, and that downed him! Hurray! Somebody hold the steeple on while I give one more praise jump."

"Did he leave on that?" asked the reporter, when he had once more captured the deacon.

"He went off to buy a square meal for his family, and got into jail before he had gone a block! We fixed him! We paid him in counterfeit money, and now he is doing the great bail act and waiting for us to come and fetch him out! Hurray! But won't he wait though? I say, just move the clapper of the bell one side so I can do the occasion justice, will you?" And with a howl of thanksgiving, the deacon went clear to the top of the building, and the reporter left, rather inclined to rejoice with the congregation over the fact that one Brooklyn church had some reason to feel happy.

How Kalamazoo Got Its Name.

From the Chicago Times.

A German paper explains the origin of the name Kalamazoo by declaring that the first settler in the place was a German; that he had a son named Karl; that he kept a saloon, which he closed, lawfully, every night at 9 o'clock, his injunction to his son being regularly made at that hour in these words: "Karl, macht zu!" The Indians took note of these words and didn't like them, as they shut off the supply of whisky. Like Ali Baba in the "Forty Thieves," they tried to get the open sesame of the place. The nearest they could come to it was "Ka'lama'zu," and whenever they spoke of the location of the enterprising German's saloon they always referred to it and him as "Old Ka'lama'zu." In due time the name, with the modern spelling, Kalamazoo, came as a matter of course.

A Chicago Incident.

From the New York World.

When the Chicago police raid a gambling saloon they give public notice in advance, and make a celebration of it. On Saturday night 5,000 people assembled to see the great trick act on the corner of Madison and Clark streets. The patrol wagons dashed through the streets like engines, the crowd cheered, the detectives ran up ladders and displayed superhuman bravery in rescuing roulette wheels, chips and tables. The police arrested 150 men indiscriminately, and the show was over. Then the magistrates released all the gamblers on bail, they went back and resumed business, and the newspapers want to know if the show was intended as an advertisement or a public entertainment.

FIVE O'CLOCK TEA.

Nothing but a London hat does for the swell of Gotham now. Hats of domestic manufacture give him softening of the brain.

The modern drawing-room, to be acceptable, should be made to represent "fashionable confusion" in all its elegance and sumptuousness.

There is an unusual variety of fur-trimmed wraps, and the majority are handsome, especially that known as the St. Petersburg circular. It is not inflammable.

Some of the handsomest of the imported evening dresses are of white camel's-hair embroidered in colors on the waist and on the skirt in leaves and flowers.

Too great an abundance of household plants and flowers is said by physicians to be productive of malaria, but this does not mean that all exotics "must go."

Among certain fashionable women the dog mania is carried to the most disgusting extremes of affectation, and well may refined people cry, "Turn the rascals out."

It would be interesting to know where some of the birds came from that now ornament the girl of the period's autumn hat. Can it be that they are made to order?

Oriental parlor carpets are already declared to be out of date, and the old-fashioned bouquet patterns of a quarter of a century ago are revived in all their own and much original new glory.

Gray being one of the most fashionable colors, unsophisticated folk remark upon the large number of supposed brides they meet here, there and everywhere. Where ignorance is bliss, etc.

Not only the bride, but the bridesmaids now carry prayer-books at church wedding ceremonies, and the books are an ecclesiastical present from the not always excessively religious bridegroom.

It is not much of a compliment to Lord Chief Justice Coleridge that a new and very gaudy scarf should be named after him, but this is one of the penalties of being a distinguished gentleman.

Heavy brass chains are now used to loop aside portieres and window curtains, and window poles are of both brass and nickel-plate. The seal of unattainability must be put on drawing-rooms now.

"Ma," he asked, while reading the bill-of-fare at Windsor table d'hote the other day, "Ma, what's an omelette souffle?" "An omelet Sue Flay," repeated Mrs. Suddenriches; "oh, its an ordinary egg thing named in honor of a girl who was cook to one of them ancient kings of France."

A prominent fraternity man was initiated, and tickets for the grand reunion at Mercantile Library Hall on the 16th inst., were distributed. This new branch is on the high road to prosperity, its location being an excellent one for the ingathering of such as will be helped when adversity and disease overtakes them.

The following officers were installed at the session of Franklin Temple of Honor, No. 3, on Saturday night: C. J. Helmes, W. C. T.; Fred W. Still, W. V. T.; G. W. This staunch old temple has kept the standard unfurled for eighteen years and will celebrate its anniversary on Friday the 9th inst., with a musicale. They propose also to give a grand hop at the Pickwick on Thanksgiving eve.

THE THEATERS.

A manager of one of the visiting companies last week remarked: "Why is it that St. Louis is so poor a show town?" and the response was prompt and quick, "Because the attractions are poorer; bring fine, good, shows here, and they will all do business, but you cannot gull the people here;" and, although not so elegantly expressed as it might have been, the idea conveyed was exactly the one I have entertained for a long time. Good stars, good plays and good companies almost invariably do fine business in St. Louis, and it is not unusual to see all the houses prospering at the same time, under reasonable circumstances. During the present week no less than four graduates from the variety stage are appearing in "drama," and, although there is no special drawback from the method in which they have made reputations, if they had made progress in the line of the legitimate, such can hardly be said to be the case in every instance.

For instance, Charles Gardner appeared at the People's Theater in a mess of rubbish with the original parts very thin and the "adapted" scenes from "Rosedale" and other sources the only portions of any interest whatever. Gardner has the lightest kind of dramatic ability, but makes a hearty, wholesome and presentable, although middle-aged German boy, and when he is not "acting" but doing his songs and dances he is interesting, as he sings well and dances better, but it is only the same branch of work he has been doing for years on the variety stage. Patti Rosa, a very clever and good-looking little woman, struggles very hard with an Irish character, but English actors and actresses are not remarkable successes in Hibernianisms, and she is better when she is singing or agitating her shapely feet. The "drama" of "Karl" has a comic lawyer with a regulation red handkerchief pinned to his coat-tail, and a couple of Gypsies who, in ignorance of Romany "patter," employ a species of comic dialect, a libel on broken Italian, popularly known as "Diego." The piece is well set, the Gypsy encampment being especially handsome.

Carrie Swain, who appeared at the Standard last night, possesses in "Cad" another very weak and improbable pot-pourri of incidents presumed to be representative of city life. City people do very odd and eccentric things, but in Miss Swain's drama they let their "emotionality" run riot. This is to be regretted, as the little lady has some remarkable qualifications. Chief amongst these are: she does not imitate Maggie Mitchell or Lotta; that she is a merry, vivacious and spirited actress, and in temperament as well as form, well adapted to the role of a tom-boy; she bears a wonderfully sweet and expressive voice, which, with cultivation, would become a remarkable adjunct to her other qualifications. Her songs and dances, together with her patent flip-flap, are equal to those of the average male performer, but the pity remains that she has not a good drama and means of developing her undoubted talents. Her company is very fair, but it is not pleasant to see an excellent, well-schooled actor, like Walter Lennox, devoting his time an entire season to a commonplace part in such a play as "Cad." Long before the curtain rose there was not a vacant seat in the house.

"Vim" was given last night at the Olympic to a crowded upstairs auditorium and a good audience down stairs. Neil Burgess has made a specialty for several seasons of eccentric old women, and his starring venture was—like Denman Thompson's—based upon something like a real portrayal of character. He has a natural and easy Yankee dialect which is something akin to the cockney twang, and they are peculiarly adapted to comedy. Burgess is very funny, and the lines of "Vim" are full of humor; a great deal of real kettle, tub and poultry business is introduced, and, as in "Widow Bedott," of whom Mrs. Puffy is a transplanted version, some business which is reminiscent of pantomime. A "sensation" is introduced in the last act when the henpecked Mr. Puffy falls asleep at a picnic and dreams that he is a clown at the circus and that his better half is a pad rider. In this a "tread-mill" mechanical effect is introduced in which a horse is made to drive the machine, giving him a real running action, which allows some very peculiar and amusing business to be introduced. Mr. Burgess would do well to eliminate some of his gags which are broad and coarse, such as allusions to "kidneys in your feet," etc., which are not particularly amusing in any case. "Vim" is a string of incidents just barely connected and which might be aptly described as a "talking pantomime."

Tastes may differ and I may be at fault, but in the main when I want variety business I prefer it in Leavitt's, Miner's, Edwards' or Pastor's methods.

The Callender Minstrels and "Fun on the Bristol" were the attractions at Pope's and the Grand Opera House last evening, the houses being thin.

At Edwards' Theater Comique a change was made in the bill last night, and Prof. Wm. Adams gave some remarkable demonstrations in mesmerism. The Four Midgets, Prof. May's Dog Circus, Gohman, ventriloquist, Jessie Adams and others appear in the first part of the entertainment. Regular Tuesday matinee to-morrow at 3:30 p. m.

Gregory's Dime Museum was thronged yesterday, and the new attractions attracted a great deal of commendation and approval, to judge from the interest they excited. The Museum is an excellent place to stop in for an hour or so each week.

* * *

"The Rajah," which receives its first representation at Pope's to-night, is one of the most successful of the Madison Square series, and comes to us with the reputation of a clean, wholesome and interesting comedy-drama. H. M. Pitt is said to be very fine in the character of the nonchalant hero, and his support is good.

* * *

The first representation of the Emma Abbott season takes place at the Grand Opera House to-night, "King for a Day" being the opera. The plot is oriental and the action affords excellent opportunities for spectacular effect and handsome costuming, all of which will probably be taken full advantage of. The cast will embrace Emma Abbott, whose voice seems to have improved with her bulk; Mrs. Zelda Seguin, who will receive a warm welcome: Wm. Castle and Tagliapietra, the new baritone of the company, who sings delightfully and acts with great dash and fire. The ever charming "Martha" will be given to-morrow evening.

CHERUB.

Stage Splinters.

John L. Sullivan and his confreres occupied a box at Pope's last evening.

"The Hoop of Gold," which will soon be produced at Pope's, has been well received elsewhere.

Ernest Albert has just had introduced into his household a new realistic effect. Its imitation of an infant crying early in the morning is said to be perfect.

James Hannerty, treasurer at the Standard and Mat Hastings, the artist, have issued a wierd and ghastly cartoon entitld, "The Last Trump," representing two articulated flesh frames playing cards on a tombstone.

One of Sullivan's best pieces of "paper" represents the champion in the center with the ten men he has knocked out arranged around him. To the lower right hand corner a blank is left with an interrogation mark and the word "Next" beneath.

Wainwratta, the slack wire walker who created so great a sensation at the Standard last week, was not on the bill Saturday night, and caused much disappointment. Wainwratta, who is about 28 years of age, has been in this country about seven weeks. His father was a wire rope walker in London, and he began practicing when he had accomplished the feat of walking on terra firma. He ran away from home, and has, in fourteen years, appeared in every capital in Europe, devoting much of his time to Paris, where he was well acquainted with Lauck and Fox the St. Louis gymnasts.

The Richmond-Graham Disbandment.

On Saturday evening last the Richmond-Graham "Cavots" Company disbanded. Mr. John H. Russell, the manager and financial backer of the enterprise, paid off the members of the company in full and sent them back to New York. The misfortune was precipitated by the unfortunate illness of Miss Adah Richmond, who during week before last had a bunion bunglingly treated in an Illinois town, the foot being cut and a serious blood poisoning ensuing. For some time it was feared that Miss Richmond would lose her foot, but it is now getting better, and there is a prospect of it getting well shortly. In the meantime it proved impossible for Mr. Graham to carry the entire drama on his shoulders, and after struggling very hard to do so last week gave it up as a bad job. Mr. Russell had made arrangements to put on Daly's comedy, "An Arabian Night," in the event of Miss Richmond's recovery and the company going on; but after getting the advice of Manager Robertson and other friends he decided that it was imperative to close his season. "Carrots" was a rather better adaptation of Joaquin Miller's "Silent Man" than has been presented here, but the subject and style of the drama are worn threadbare, and it was impossible to carry it through. One of the ladies of the company, Miss Hattie Roscoe, played the part of "Carrots" during the week and did the best she could with it, but Miss Richmond was missed of course. Mr. Graham will have but little trouble in placing himself for the balance of the season, being an excellent general comedian, while Miss Richmond will require several weeks' recuperation and will then be in requisition by some of the light opera companies organizing in New York. The balance of the company will have to take their chances of "catching on" in Gotham and go back at a reasonably good time to get in at the organization of some of the new companies.

TWO STATE INSTITUTIONS.

The Future of the Blind Institute and Deaf Mute Asylum.

State Senators Jacobs and Baldwin are in the city on business, and will to-day visit the Missouri Institution for the Education of the Blind, at Twentieth and Morgan streets. It was principally through the efforts of these gentlemen that the last Legislature appropriated the money with which this dreary old structure has been made half way comfortable. The Senators are firmly convinced that all interests would be better subserved by the removal of the institution to some pleasant interior point. The property now in use belongs to the State, and from its sale would be realized sufficient to erect a really handsome and commodious institution. The matter will be brought to the attention of the next General Assembly. Another institution which will come in for some attention is the Deaf and Dumb Asylum at Fulton. This is one of the handsomest and best appointed institutions in the State, but it is a dead expense to the State. In the State of Ohio all the laws and journals and other official printing is executed by the pupils of the Deaf Mute Asylum. They also do the binding for the State, and the institution is almost self-supporting. The hours of labor are light, the idea being to give the pupil an opportunity to acquire a trade at which a comfortable living may be made.

Lieutenant-Governor Campbell recently visited the Missouri institution, and says that it is conducted on a plane of luxury. The cattle are Alderneys, and the finest bred swine to be found in Missouri serve to gratify the fancy of the factor of the institution for raising blooded hogs.

A TOUGH QUESTION.

A Talk With a Conservative Irishman on Irish Affairs.

"I have been in the country only a very short time." The speaker was a fresh-faced, slender, rather handsome, but very young looking man whom a reporter of the POST-DISPATCH had accosted in the rotunda of the Southern. It was Mr. W. E. McCartney, of Ulster, Ireland, who is traveling through the States in the joint pursuit of health and pleasure. "I stopped a day or two in New York," he continued, stayed awhile in New Jersey, then glanced at Philadelphia, and came through here. I am going on to California."

"What about the Irish question?" queried the reporter. Mr. McCartney has made an intelligent study of the problem, and is thoroughly conversant with it.

"Well, Mr. Parnell is making a strong campaign. He has been working in a county adjoining mine, but we are strongly inclined the other way, and he does not get much encouragement from us. The North of Ireland is in better condition than any other part of the land, and there is less agitation there. The agitation is mostly in the Northwest, West and South. In many parts of these regions the land rents for little or nothing, and isn't worth tilling at that, and many of the people are dependent on the English harvests for means of making a living. There the land league has taken a strong hold. Our people are more prosperous and thrifty and hence are not so liable to come under agitation influences."

"Is Mr. Parnell really strong in the country?"

"Yes, the land league practically controls Ireland. There are several parties among the people and it would be difficult to give a clear view of the situation. Outrages have ceased in great measure since the passage of the bill to prevent them. There is a strong organization for the purpose of doing violence and frightening England into concessions, but it is made up of a small body of mostly outside of Ireland. I think it is a branch of the Communistic and Nihilistic organization on the continent. The party headed by Parnell, Healy and others like them are extremists in desiring home rule or a complete independence of Ireland from the English Government. I do not think anything will satisfy them short of this."

DETERMINED DESPERATE MEN

"Is the general sentiment of the country favorable to this?"

"I can't say whether the people would follow their leaders to this extent, but they are certainly powerful, and have a strong backing. Sentiment is changing as the effect of the land bill of 1880 is felt more and more. That bill has almost completely revolutionized land tenure. The tenants practically hold the land in perpetuity at a rental fixed by law. This bill has cut down the income of the landlords fully one-quarter. They are, however, willing to bear the loss if quiet should result from it. The fact is, if the land were given to the people a new class of landlords would spring up in a few years, resulting from mortgages on it."

"Is home rule or independence practicable?"

"Not in my opinion, but I am a strong believer in the English connection. If there should be an Irish Parliament there would be a dead-lock at once between the Upper and Lower Houses. Mr. Parnell, to get any unanimity at all, would have to create a vast number of new peers, and on what principle would he make them? Home rule is a myth. Neither the author of the idea, nor any of his followers have been able to give a single reasonable or feasible plan for it. As for independence, I consider that impossible. Ireland is bound to England, not only by law but by nature and by national dependence. England is the market of Ireland. The least interference with her interchange of commodities is

DEATH TO IRISH TRADE

and manufactures, as was instanced not long ago by the prohibition of the shipment of Irish cattle into England for a short time. The Irish people at present cannot govern themselves as well as England can govern them. Besides, one insuperable obstacle is the fact that the English people, from the lowest to the highest, are opposed to it heart and soul. Independent Ireland would be not only an enemy at her doors, but a standing menace, by reason of the facility for attack it would furnish to other enemies. England can never consent to it. The fact is, I think the English leaders and people are inclined to deal justly by Ireland. Of course blunders have been made, but immense concessions have also been made."

"What is the prospect at present?"

"That question can scarcely be answered until after the election. The English election will not be later than next spring, and if the two parties are pretty evenly balanced, Mr. Parnell will have the balance of power. If he goes into Parliament with fifty men—he claims seventy, but say fifty—whenever there comes up a question on which the parties have to separate, he can destroy the Government majority, and such a crisis is sure to come sooner or later, however much they may talk about a combination against the Irish party. What we want now is a settlement, because without that everything is paralyzed and capital will not be sent into the country. Even now capitalists refuse to lend money on the best securities in Ireland. I think the problem will be worked out in time."

Mr. McCartney said that his first impression of America was one of surprise on the evidence of wealth and prosperity and of vastness that he noticed around him.

LAPLATA, November 2.—A party of railroad surveyors have been camping in the suburbs of the city this week, running a line, as the chief engineer informed your correspondent, for a new direct route from Chicago to Kansas City. They started from Bucklin, on the Hannibal and St. Joe Road, and will go from here to Knightsville, Lewis County, at which point their contract is exhausted. The surveyors were very reticent as to the company which is furnishing the money for this survey, but your correspondent has it from a reliable source that this is the same route projected about two years ago, and surveyed once by the A., T. & S. F. Company.——B. R. Winters, formerly of this place, but recently of Brunswick, Mo., has returned to LaPlata, and will engage in the restaurant business.——Mrs. A. P. The law of the State makes it a felony for a banker to receive deposits after the bank is known to be in a failing condition, and these were the grounds on which the prosecution hoped to convict Melone. Two indictments are still pending against Mr. Melone in this county. Rev. A. M. Davis, a minister of the gospel of the M. E. EQUITABLE RELIEF.

Judge Thayer Decides the Case of Biddle vs. McDonough.

In 1870 Thomas McDonough leased of Mrs. Annie E. Biddle a lot of ground on Seventh street, near Biddle, for a period of thirty years. It was agreed that from and after January 1, 1880, McDonough was to pay rent at the rate of 6 per cent on the value of the property, the value to be determined by two appraisers, one of whom was to be appointed by Mrs. Biddle and the other by McDonough. At the October term of the Circuit Court last year Mrs. Biddle sued McDonough, alleging that he had not kept his agreement, but that the persons appointed by him were either interested or incompetent. This morning Judge Thayer decided the case in the following written opinion: "The petition clearly charges that the defendant has been guilty of a fraudulent evasion of the covenant to appoint appraisers, in that it alleges that he has from time to time, when called upon to appoint an appraiser, not only chosen incompetent and interested persons, but that he secretly instructed them not to agree to any appraisement that was reasonable. The Supreme Court in the case of the City of St. Louis vs. the St. Louis Gas Light Company decided that whilst courts of equity will not, as a general rule, enforce the specific performance of an agreement to arbitrate, yet that they will (where the element of fraud intervenes on either side and where a gross wrong is about to be perpetrated and the party wronged is without the means of full legal redress) lay hold of the case and grant adequate relief, even though such relief amounts in substance to fixing by judicial determination the value of which the parties have agreed should be determined by arbitrators.

"To warrant a departure from the general rule, I think the above elements must occur, that is to say bad faith on one side, a serious injury thereby inflicted on the other party, and an absence of all other means of adequate redress. Entertaining this view of the law the question I have to determine at this time is whether the plaintiff has made out a case that will warrant present interference. And on this issue, after a careful consideration of the testimony, I am forced to decide in the negative. The court decides that the appraisers appointed by the defendant were not interested parties, nor incompetent to perform the duties which they had undertaken.

"But even if the court found that the appraiser or appraisers chosen by defendant were incompetent, this, in my judgment, would not authorize me to entertain the bill, unless it furthermore appeared that the defendant either chose incompetent appraisers knowing them to be incompetent, or that he chose men whose opinions in the matter to be decided he knew he could control, and did control for selfish and dishonest purposes. The bill alleges such conduct on the defendant's part, and such allegations were, in my judgment, necessary to make out a case for equitable relief; but the proof fails to sustain the charge. The evidence falls far short, in my estimation of showing that the defendant's wishes or instructions dominated the judgment and will of the appraisers by him chosen. In the absence of sufficient proof to maintain the allegations of fraud on the part of the defendant, I dismiss the bill."
